TO THE READER.

THIS work has been undertaken, not so much from a paucity of editions of the most popular and brilliant play of Aristophanes, as in defence of the old text, which, as it seems to me, has in many places been altered, without sufficient reason, not only by the German, but by their too obsequious followers, the English editors. I am well aware that to recall generally rejected readings may seem to some not only presumption, but a retrogression in scholarship. What strikes me, however, so strongly, brought up as I have been in the old-fashioned school of verse-writing, is not only the needlessness (though that is often very apparent), but the want of poetic feeling shown in many of the changes introduced. In saying this, I would not be understood as speaking of Aristophanes alone. Some changes, of course, are necessary, and many are such as commend themselves at once to every editor of judgment and taste. But others imply a caprice which seems to let nothing alone, and which has led the authors of them habitually to indulge in ingenious guesses, without possessing (as it seems to me) that correct sense of fitness and rhythmical harmony which are essential conditions of sober criticism.

Dr Holden will forgive me for expressing my surprise that so sound and sober a scholar should so meekly bow to the dictates of Meineke and Cobet. The otherwise excellent edition of Albert Müller (to which all succeeding editors must look for a full record of various readings and conjectures, as well as for a copious apparatus of references and exegetical notes) is too often liable to the charge of altering the MS. readings without due cause. Our own Elmsley was, like the sagacious and judicious Dobree, often successful, and some of his corrections are evidently right: but of a large number of his alterations, as indeed of Dobree's, it is impossible to say more than that they are good readings in their way, and if one was treating an old writer as a teacher treats a schoolboy's exercise, one might be willing enough to accept them. No critic perhaps has indulged in wilder guesses than Hamaker¹; and yet both Meineke and Dr Holden seem to show a respect for them which I, for one, am unable to feel. It appears to me that a conjecture ought not to be admitted merely because it is possibly or even probably true, unless the MSS. readings are, on metrical or grammatical grounds, certainly or most probably corrupt,—a canon which, rightly interpreted, would eliminate at least half of the alterations that have found a place in the texts of the Greek poets². Mr

² The ugly word ἐντετευτλιδωμένης, adopted in Ach. 894 by

Blaydes seems to commence with the assumption that MSS. are generally very corrupt, and wholly untrustworthy; and that some one or other of a series of ingenious conjectures has a better chance of being right. On this subject I entirely agree with Mr Rogers¹: "Modern German criticism, as regards Aristophanes at least, is calculated rather to display the ingenuity of the critic, than to improve the text of the author. Alterations are introduced, without any semblance of authority or probability apparently for no other reason than that they would, in the opinion of the editor, have done as well as the received and authorized reading." Fortunately (he adds) each succeeding editor sweeps away the emendations of his predecessor, so that we have a corrective process constantly going on that tends to bring us back to the old texts².

Meineke and Dr Holden from a conjecture of Mr Blaydes', seems to me far less probable than the vulg. ἐντετευτλανωμένης, from τεύτλανον=τεῦτλον. It is true that τευτλις occurs and τεύτλανον does not; but τευτλιδούν is a pure invention.

² I may illustrate these remarks by two passages in the present play. In v. 347, ἐμέλλετ' ἄρ' ἅπαντες ἀνασείειν βοήν has been altered, after Dobree and Elmsley, into ἐμέλλετ' ἄρα παρταῖς ἀνασείειν τῆς βοῆς, or τῆς βοῆς (ἄρα the MSS.). Unpleasing as this is to the ear, and (as I hope I have shown in the note) wholly unnecessary to the sense, it has found favour with most of the recent editors; while Mr Blaydes would have us believe, what I for one never can believe, that the poet wrote ἐμέλλετ' ἄρ' ἀνήσειν ποθ' ὑμεῖς τῆς βοῆς. The other passage is v. 318, ὑπὲρ ἐπιξήνου θελήσω τὴν κεφαλὴν ἔχων λέγειν. I have no doubt whatever that this is the true reading; and I have quoted in the note several iambic verses.

A play so full of difficulties and political allusions as the Acharnians cannot be really explained by the short and rather scant notes which Mr Green and Mr Hailstone have given in their expurgated school-manuals. Young students are too apt to suppose (which is a great delusion) that all is simple and straightforward that is not commented upon in the editions they use. On the other hand, the length to which A. Müller's notes extend is likely to deter all but the more careful and industrious students from using his otherwise learned and exhaustive work. Mr Mitchell's book is copious in illustration, and shows great appreciation of the author's meaning and wit, but it is of no value whatever as a critical edition. Not only of this play, but of all the comedies of Aristophanes it may be said, that there is ample room for a good annotated edition intermediate between the two extremes of brevity and prolixity,—avoiding on the one hand (as far as is possible in writing English notes) verbosity and which, if changed into trochaics by the addition of a pes creticus, would give exactly the same position in the verse for τὴν κεφαλὴν. In truth, an anapaest is by no means uncommon in this place in the comic senarius; and we have no right whatever, because a second example happens to be wanting, to exclude it from a comic trochaic. Yet even Porson and Elmsley would alter τὴν κεφαλὴν to τὸν Κέφαλον (the joke of which I do not pretend to explain), while Müller admits into his text a conjecture of Hausing, ὑπὲρ ἐπιξήρου θελίσω τὴν γε κεφαλὴν σχῶν λέγειν (!), and Meineke coolly reads πάνθ' ὅσ' ἂν λέγω λέγειν, quoting in defence of so reckless a change v. 355, ἐμοῦ θέλontos ὑπὲρ ἐπιξήρου λέγειν ὑπὲρ Λακεδαιμονίων ἅπανθ' ὅσ' ἂν λέγω.

superfluity of explanation, on the other hand, leaving nothing unexplained. Such has been my object in preparing this as well as the edition of the Peace already published in the same form. I have consulted, I think, all the notes and commentaries that are really useful, including a careful perusal of the Scholia. In not a few passages, as it seems to me, the true sense has been overlooked or misunderstood, and I have endeavoured in such cases to throw some new light on the meaning of the author.

Though I admit with regret that some passages in this play are not fit for school-reading, I nevertheless object altogether to expurgated editions, as serving no really good purpose, while they misrepresent or pervert the whole tenor and character of a play. No young student need read verses that are certain not to be set nor in any way asked for: every one can read them in the cheap texts of Aristophanes that are so readily procurable. Jokes of this kind are generally as silly¹ as they are coarse: they are fitted only to give pleasure to the mob for whom they were meant, and no well-regulated mind will dwell on them with delight. I think it better to let an ancient author (if he is to be read at all) speak for himself, than to attempt to make him appear moral when he is not so.

It has been part of my plan to discuss briefly

such readings as seemed of sufficient importance to require notice. I have adhered to the method I have always followed, of making such remarks part of the general commentary, though the custom of writing critical notes separately, and in Latin, has some undoubted advantages. The disadvantage is, that nine out of ten students never look at separate critical notes at all. In revising the text I have compared throughout the readings of all the good editions of this play. Dr Holden generally takes Meineke for his guide: on the whole, I much prefer Bergk's text to any other, and I have followed him in the main, though rejecting some of the alterations which even he, by no means an innovator¹, has adopted. The Ravenna MS. (R) on the whole has been my guide rather than the Paris A, which in this play appears to be of next authority.

In the country dialects of the Megarian and the Boeotian, the variety of readings in the MSS. and the paucity of Inscriptions of the period combine to make conjectural emendation doubly difficult. This part of the play has been a fertile field for critical sagacity: but the harvest, from the very diversity of opinions, has been a poor one, and it seems best on the whole to adhere to the most approved MS.

readings, even without having entire confidence in their correctness. I think Bergk has shown a sound discretion in rejecting most of the unauthorized changes. It is evident that, even if we had more Boeotian and Megarian Inscriptions, they would be no guide to the patois of the country-folk, nor can much aid be obtained from the broad Doric which prevails in so large a part of the Lysistrata. Nor, again, is it possible to feel assured that the poet himself in all cases correctly wrote the words he may have heard in the conversation of Doric peasants in the Athenian agora. To the ordinary student, the exact orthography of provincial Greek words is of much less moment than it is to the philologist. In a work intended for the former, it seemed the less necessary to exercise the critical office too rigidly in this particular part of the play, which may be allowed to have come down to us in a less satisfactory condition.

The dialogue at the end of the play between Lamachus and Dicaeopolis seems also in some parts corrupt; but the changes adopted by Müller on metrical grounds are too violent to be safely followed. I have mentioned in the notes the most probable of them; though I am aware that these are matters of but little interest to ordinary readers. Few English students now undergo that special training in criticism that has always been characteristic of German scholarship. We retain, it is true—though contrary to the judgment of many—the practice of Greek and Latin verse-composition; but our classical studies of late years have taken a different direction, and philology, history, and philosophy are the most usual subjects of our lectures and examinations. As a consequence, we seem to pay less attention to those niceties of metre and syntax which engaged the acute and observant minds of Porson, Dawes, Elmsley, and Dobree. This school has its latest representatives in Germany in Madvig and Cobet. Many of their proposed alterations may seem improbable and unnecessary; but they have earned the respect and gratitude of English scholars, and their works are an encouragement to the somewhat relaxing interest in close verbal scholarship, by proving that classical criticism is still thought worthy of being made the lifelong labour of the profoundest intellects and the most accomplished minds.

THE Comedy called, from the persons composing the Chorus, Ἀχαρνῆς, i.e. townsmen of the large and important Attic deme which had suffered so severely from the ravages of the Spartan king, Archidamos (Thucyd. II. 19), was brought out at the Lenæa¹ in the Archonship of Euthydemus², B.C. 425, in the sixth year of the War. Between the capture of the port of Megara by Athens in the year 427 (Thucyd. III. 51, Ach. 761), and the death of Sitalkes in 424 (Thuc. IV. 101, Ach. 134), but three years intervene. The express mention of the sixth year (Ach. 266, 890) fixes the date at the precise point between these historical limits. Like the two preceding plays, the Banqueters (Δαιταλεῖς) and the Babylonians, which latter had appeared the year before³, the Acharnians was brought out under another name,—a fact avowed by the poet himself in more passages than one⁴, though his real reasons for doing so are unknown, and cannot be certainly explained¹. The Bespecters, perhaps, was exhibited by Philonides², who also brought out the Wasps and the Frogs. The Babylonians and the Acharnians were given to Callistratus, a friend of the poet's, though whether a comic author, like Philonides, or only an actor, ὑποκριτής, has been doubted³. It seems probable that both were well-known as writers of comedy, though nothing is recorded about Callistratus⁴. The first play which Aristophanes brought out in his own name was that exhibited the year afterwards, the Clouds or Knights), Ἰππείδης, a play which the author was evidently engaged upon when the Acharnians was acted⁵. In the Clouds (531) he jocosely compares the disowning of his own plays to an infant put out to nurse.

⁵ v. 300.

The Acharnians gained the first prize, Cratinus being second and Eupolis third, the one with the Χειμαζόμενοι, the other with the Νουμηνίαι. Its object is essentially a political one, which was to expose the folly and injustice of the War-party as represented by Cleon, Lamachus and Alcibiades, who was just then coming into notice¹, and even by Pericles, as the author of the Μεγαρικὸν Ψήφισμα, by which the Doric neighbours of Athens had been excluded from the market². The poet takes a fair view of the position between both the belligerents. If the Athenians had been wronged by the Lacedaemonians, by their destructive raids on the farms³, the Lacedaemonians were wronged by the Megaric decree, which the Athenians had refused to rescind at their special request⁴, and by their eager and inconsiderate haste to rush into war⁵.

It is evident that in the Babylonians the policy of Athens under the leadership of Cleon had been im-

pugned, and the pressure of the democratic influence on the subject states had been severely exposed, probably with marked reference to the then recent event of the cruel punishment of the Mytilenians that had been advocated by Cleon for their unsuccessful revolt¹. That Cleon himself had been attacked by the poet we must infer, not only from the general sketch and purport of the Babylonians as given in the Parabasis of the present play², but from the known fact, more than once alluded to in the play itself³, that Cleon prosecuted the author of it (viz. either Aristophanes or Callistratus, it is uncertain which) for speaking evil of the government in the presence of the allies. It is probable, from the expression in v. 379, εἰσελκίσας γάρ μ' ἐς τὸ βουλευτήριον, that the process called εἰσαγγελία was the form of the action adopted on this occasion. From the triumphant tone of the poet in alluding to this event, it is clear that Cleon had failed in getting a verdict against him. No less a principle, in truth, was involved than what we should now describe as the censorship versus the freedom of the press. Cleon therefore was as determined to put down Aristophanes, as Aristophanes was to maintain the right of publicly assailing the faults or follies of the government. The persistent attack on Cleon both in the Acharnians and in the Knights was met by an action for ξενία or alien birth, one of the commonest forms of συκοφαντία brought against obnoxious citizens with a view to their being declared ἄτιμοι¹. The poet evidently thought the attempt to silence him was unjust. For he alludes to his own motives as just with repeated emphasis; and if he was conscious that his conduct was fair and upright, he could have regarded Cleon's enmity in no other light than that in which Plato regarded the death of Socrates. Not only is the peace-loving countryman, who throughout represents the poet's own views, called Δικαιοπόλις, but he promises ὡς κωμωδήσει τὰ δίκαια, i. e. that he will persist in the same course in spite of all that Cleon can do to prevent him¹, nay, even if all the world is against him²; and he adds, that "even Comedy knows what justice is!" Part of this self-devotion to the cause of justice is the frequent reproach he throws on the Athenians for not seeing that they were themselves to blame for the war fully as much as the Spartan party³. He blames their vanity and their foolish complience with any demand accompanied by compliments to their city⁴. It would seem that he had warned his countrymen in the Babylonians against listening to the specious appeals of the ambassadors from the Leontines, the chief of whom was Gorgias⁵. On the whole then Aristophanes stands before us as one who has dared to say an unpopular truth, who has attacked a popular minister, who has been made a martyr to his own patriotism, and now asks the support of the right-minded (δεξιοί) of his countrymen against the oppression of the powerful and overbearing⁷.

(The last words refer to the play having been brought out, not at the Lenææ, but at the City Dionysia.) To the poet's satire on the elections we may refer Ach. 598, ἐχειροτόνησαν γάρ με— Δ. κόκκυγές γε τρεῖς, and 642, καὶ τοὺς δήμους ἐν ταῖς πόλεσιν δείξας ὡς δημοκρατοῦνται. Mr Grote contends that the conduct of Athens towards its allies was generally reasonable, and no attempt was made to force on them a democratic constitution. The natural love of αἰτορομία and the agitation of the oligarchical factions against the Athenian rule were probably the main causes of dissatisfaction. See Thuc. I. 77, which is a defence against the charge of oppression.

⁵ v. 371—4, 636—40. Hence the Athenians are called Κεχρηναῖον πᾶσι in Equit. 1262. Perhaps Thucydides means the same when he makes the Spartan Archidamus say (i. 84) τῶν τε σὺν ἐπαίνοιο ἐξοστρυνόντων ἡμᾶς ἐπὶ τὰ δεινὰ παρὰ τὸ δοκοῦν ἡμῖν οὐκ ἐπαίρομεθα ἡδονῇ.

⁷ Cleon was βιαιότατος τῶν πολιτῶν, according to the well-known

That Dicaeopolis speaks throughout in the person of Aristophanes, cannot be doubted. He is even made to say that now at least Cleon will not prosecute *him*¹, and that he was dragged before the Boule by Cleon². Between Dicaeopolis and Aristophanes Callistratus intervenes, and thus the third party assumes the character of the first. It does not appear altogether improbable that Aristophanes himself acted the part of Dicaeopolis, and was known to the audience to have done so.

If we could show this, we should directly obtain some personal characteristics of the poet,—his small size and deficiency in physical strength³, as we know that he was bald and had a ‘shiny’ forehead⁴. Ranke however denies that the poet himself ever was an actor⁵. There are difficulties in this question estimate of Thucydides, III. 36. Aristophanes speaks of him as an absolute monster, a sort of hydra to be attacked and overcome. Pac. 755. His accusation he calls a διαβολή, Aeh. 380. 502. 630.

which it is not easy to solve¹. If it was notorious that Aristophanes was the author, why should he bring it out in another's name? And if Callistratus, not Aristophanes, was the person prosecuted by Cleon for the Babylonians, would Callistratus have incurred a second risk by lending his name to the Acharnians? Could Aristophanes have asked him to do so? A. Müller thinks that Cleon was well aware who was the real author of the Babylonians, and that he brought the action against Aristophanes himself². At all events, he contends, if the action was brought in the name of Callistratus at first, the poet must have come forward and avowed the authorship in defence of his friend.

The motives which induced Aristophanes to bring out his first three plays in another's name are perhaps truly avowed in a well-known passage³.

¹ It is remarkable that not only Dicaeopolis passim but even the Chorus more than once seem to speak in the character of the poet. In v. 200 the Chorus, who are as yet on the side of the war-party, declare through their Coryphaeus that they hate Dicaeopolis worse than they hate Cleon, "whom," says the speaker, "I will yet cut into shoe-leather for the play of the Cavaliers (Knights)." Again in 1155 the same Coryphaeus says that Antimachus when Choragus at the Lenaea shut him out when he was dining (δειπνῶν), i.e. excluded him from the feast given at the ἐπαισία, in honour of the victory. Müller argues that Aristophanes must be meant, and the occasion alluded to must be the success of the Δαιτυλίδης, since the Babylonians was acted at the City Dionysia, and Callistratus, as the exhibitor, could not possibly have been passed over at the ἐπαισία. (Praef. p. xii.)

³ Equit. 512—540. A. Müller (Praef. p. xii.) infers from the words οὐχὶ πάλαι that it had long been no secret who was the

where he says his friends had expressed their surprise that he had not long ago 'asked for a chorus,' i.e. brought out a play, on his own account. The reason, he says, was his consciousness of the fickleness of popular favour, and his reluctance to court a popularity which in some of his contemporaries had been short-lived. The patriotic desire, avowed in the *Clouds*¹, to elevate Comedy above the low buffoonery and the open indecency² which had hitherto characterised it, and to make it, like its sister Tragedy, a means of imparting to the citizens at once information and counsel on political matters, was also too hazardous to be attempted by one avowed author. He seems therefore to have watched the experiment while another performed it for him. It may have been known to, or at least suspected by, some, and probably by Cleon himself, that Aristophanes was the real author: but it does not follow that the poet himself wished the fact to become known. Cleon, no doubt, in prosecuting Aristophanes or his representative Callistratus, thought to nip in the real author of the three preceding plays. After all, the natural timidity of young authors to face public criticism is often the real motive for the concealment of the name.

but this new growth, so pregnant with danger to himself, and so likely to damage his influence by diminishing his popularity¹. But the theatre proved too strong even for Cleon. The failure of his prosecution is sufficiently shown by the jubilant and defiant tone which the poet assumes in referring to it². In the Clouds he even speaks of sparing Cleon, and not trampling on him when he was down³. In the *Wasps*⁴ an action brought against the poet consequent on the Knights appears to be meant; and to judge by the context, Aristophanes made some apology, in consideration of which Cleon, mindful perhaps of his former failure, did not press the prosecution further⁵.

Thus it is plain that the relations between Cleon and Aristophanes were those of uncompromising hostility, on grounds both personal and political. It was the tug of war between the liberty of the stage and the attempt of an autocrat to stop it. Even after Cleon's death, an event which he alludes to in the Peace as a real blessing to the state¹, he speaks of him as the barking Cerberus in the world below, who may yet return to earth to disturb the city. It was too much to expect that the character of such a man should be represented to us with perfect fairness by one so openly an enemy as Aristophanes.

It is more difficult to explain the cause of the relentless animosity with which the poet assailed Euripides in this and many others of his plays, and even after his death, twenty years later, in the *Frogs*². Whether the reasons of his dislike were personal or political,—the jealousy of a rival for popular favour, or the partisanship of a faction which hated Euripides, Socrates, and Alcibiades,—we cannot tell. The latter seems the less likely if, as we believe, Euripides was an adherent to the peace-party. In none of the plays is he so unmercifully satirised as in the Acharnians, though strictly in relation to his tragic art³. We are perhaps too apt to regard tragedy and comedy as different in their nature⁴, and therefore hardly to appreciate the feeling of rivalry that may have existed between competitors for popular favour in these two departments of the Attic Drama. It is possible too that Aristophanes joined the side of those who thought the opinions of the tragic poet innovating and dangerous¹. One thing seems certain, and the result is rather a curious one,—that the satire of Aristophanes has done more in comparatively late times in the general depreciation of Euripides as a poet, than it was able to effect with any of the schools of Greek Grammarians, who appear to have preferred Euripides to both Aeschylus and Sophocles.

One character appears prominently in the present drama, respecting whom history is almost silent till the Sicilian expedition, ten years later,—the burly hero of the Gorgon-shield, jocosely called son of Gorgasus¹, the brave general Lamachus. His name does not occur in Thucydides till the year 422 (iv. 75), when we read of his making rather a dashing adventure in effecting a retreat by land from Heraclea on the Pontus to Chalcedon. From the allusion to his *μισθοφορία*² it would seem that he had held the post of strategus or envoy on some of the numerous embassies, and that a determined hatred of the Lacedaemonians was one of his characteristics³. In the Pax also he is one of the chief opponents of the peace⁴. From the frequent mention of him in Aristophanes⁵ we can hardly doubt that he was a daring and active promoter of the war at the early period to which the Acharnians refers. His death is recorded in Thuc. vi. 101⁶, under circumstances so similar to those described, in comic joke, in Ach. 1178, that the suspicion entertained on other grounds of the spuriousness of the latter passage is thereby much increased: it is either an ex post facto description or a very singular coincidence⁷.

The plot of the Acharnians bears a close resemblance to that of the Peace, which was brought out four years later, B.C. 421. In both plays a countryman complains and laments that he has been a grievous sufferer by the war; in both Pericles and Cleon are blamed as the authors, one as originating, the other as promoting it; in both a special truce is made for the private benefit of the farmer, and both conclude with an amusing contrast between the blessings of peace, and the horrors and losses of war. The Knights,—it has been remarked by Mr Grote,—makes no such complaint about the war, though it equally, if not more bitterly, assails Cleon. The victory of the Athenians at Pylos under Cleon and Demosthenes had so raised the hopes of Athens, and so depressed those of Sparta, that for the time no thought seems to have been entertained at Athens, but that the enemy must now succumb, and leave the victory in the hands of the Athenians. Hence they refused all overtures of peace from Sparta, for which the poet blames them in Pax 665. "The utter disgust for the war which marks the 'Acharnians,' a comedy exhibited about six months before the victory of Kleon, had given way before the more confident and resolute temper shown in the play of the 'Knights'".¹

The blame of the war in both plays is thrown upon Pericles as the author of the 'Megarian Decree,' which was proposed by or through him², and passed probably carried in the summer of 432 B.C. It is to be wished that we knew more clearly the feelings of Aristophanes towards the great statesman. He died however early in the war (B.C. 429), and so we lose sight of one who was the real adviser of it without finding any great censure cast upon his memory by the poet, who seems to have regarded him as an influential statesman only, but Cleon, his rival and successor, as a formidable demagogue. Mr Grote remarks (v. p. 441), "not only Pericles did not bring on the war, but he could not have averted it without such concessions as Athenian prejudice as well as Athenian patriotism peremptorily forbade." According to Thucydides, i. 79, it was Sparta that deliberately chose the war: so that nothing remained for Pericles but to direct it. Mr Grote adds that the comic writers hated Pericles, but were fond of acknowledging his powers of oratory and his long-unquestioned supremacy (p. 435). In Equit. 283 he seems mentioned with a qualified kind of praise. Of course, if Cleon was the enemy and rival of Pericles (Grote, p. 396), the poet was likely to side with Pericles, except only so far as he thought him instrumental in promoting the war. The main object which Pericles had before him in advising the war, or rather in meeting it as a necessity, was the honour of Athens. It seemed to him impossible to consent to the final demand of the Lacedaemonians (Thuc. i. 139), "to leave the Hellenes independent." This, as Mr Grote remarks (v. p. 370), "went to nothing less than the entire extinction of the Athenian empire." Cleon, while an opponent of Pericles, and yet an advocate of war, appears to have joined the side of those who objected to the dilatory policy of Pericles; while Aristophanes was one of a third—doubtless a large and influential—party who objected to the war-policy altogether. Cleon, with all his faults as a demagogue, was, as he soon proved himself, a man of action; and as such he was certain to oppose what seemed to him the pusillanimous counsel to let the enemy ravage Attica while the people remained cooped within the walls of the city. Pericles, on Ionic and the Doric races. For by successive raids into Megaris, repeated every year till the capture of Nisaea¹, as well as, not to say mainly, by the latter event, the Megarians had been reduced to such poverty from the interruption of all trade with Athens, that they had induced the Lacedaemonians to appeal to Athens in their behalf; but such was the exasperation of the Athenians against the Megarians that they refused any concession, alleging as reasons some causes which seem to have little real weight². Albert Müller, in his brief but learned Preface³, expresses his regret that no ancient writer has explained the exact relations between the Athe-

the other hand, appears to have felt that the Spartan hoplite was really the better soldier in the open field, and to have anticipated a crushing defeat in a land engagement with so numerous and well-disciplined a force. See Mr Cox, Hist. II. p. 121.

Pericles was "only the first citizen in a democracy, esteemed, trusted, and listened to, more than anyone else, by the body of citizens, but warmly opposed in most of his measures, under the free speech and latitude of individual action which reigned at Athens, even bitterly hated by many active political opponents" (Grote, p. 360). One of these was Thucydides the son of Melesias, alluded to in Ach. 703, respecting whom Mr Grote observes "we do not know the incident to which this remarkable passage alludes, nor can we confirm the statement which the Scholiast cites from Idomeneus to the effect that Thucydides was banished and fled to Artaxerxes."

nians and the Megarians, from their first alliance with Athens in the third Messenian war (B.C. 461), up to the passing of the Megaric Decree. He thinks it probable that the Athenians never forgave the defection of the Megarians to the Lacedaemonian side after the defeat of Athens at the battle of Coronea, B.C. 445¹. It may therefore be taken as one proof of the boldness of the poet in taking an unpopular side, that he should so touchingly represent the misery of the Megarians, and so plainly charge the Athenians with being the cause of it². He comes forward under the name of Dicaeopolis to protect them against the odious συκοφάνται, whom he denounces as the pest of Athens³. As regards the Boeotians, who both in this play and in the *Peace*⁴ are represented as equally excluded from the Athenian markets⁵, Müller regards the suspension of their trade as resulting from the invasion of the Thebans into Plataea in the year 431¹. The same year therefore saw the beginning of the war and the exclusion of these two peoples from Athens; and we can hardly wonder that the poet combined the events as cause and effect. Add, that it was in this year that the Athenians were persuaded to retire within their own walls by the well-meant, but questionable advice of Pericles; so that trade-supplies were still further curtailed by the interruption of all farming operations. That the Megarians had been shut out of the market even before the Megaric Decree, is the opinion of A. Müller².

The account given by the poet (515 seqq.) of the reasons which induced Pericles to pass the decree are, in the opinion of A. Müller, mere idle gossip. "Sine dubio fictae sunt, et fortasse Acharnensium tempore ab irrisoribus petulantibus Athenis circumferebantur³." Mr Grote expresses the same opinion about the anecdote given in the *Peace*⁴, where the supposed collusion of Pericles with Phidias in withholding or misappropriating some sacred gold is alleged as the cause of the war¹. What the real motive was for that untoward measure is not distinctly stated. The reasons alleged by Thucydides² are not grounds for passing the decree, but grounds for refusing to rescind it. It seems probable that the motive was one of combined hatred for their revolt, and of vengeance for the murder of the herald Anthemocritus, who had been sent by the advice of Pericles to expostulate with the Megarians on one of the two points mentioned by Thucydides, the occupation of some sacred land belonging to the Eleusinian goddesses³.

The allusion to Aspasia and her influence over Pericles⁴ is remarkable, and is probably another of

¹ "The stories about Pheidias, Aspasia, and the Megarians, even if we should grant that there is some truth at the bottom of them, must, according to Thucydides, be looked upon at worst as concomitants and pretexts rather than as real causes of the war; though modern authors in speaking of Pericles are but too apt to use expressions which tacitly assume these stories to be well-founded." (Grote, Hist. v. p. 442.) See also Mr Cox, Hist. Gr. Vol. II. p. 99. The Peloponnesian war was really due to the hostility of Corinth. (Grote, v. p. 341.)

³ The authorities for this story, which is evidently authentic, are given in full by A. Müller in p. xvii. of his Preface.

⁴ Ach. 527. Mr Grote (v. p. 362) takes ἀσπασίας as the accusative plural, but with a double entendre. This seems hardly likely, and δύο πόρνας ἀσπασίας is hardly good grammar. But Dr Holden appears to follow him, as he omits the name of Ἀσπασία in his Onomasticon. To this lady perhaps Euripides alludes in the Medea, 842, where Cypris is said τῇ σοφίᾳ παρέδρους πέμπειν ἔρωτας, and ib. 1085, ἀλλὰ γὰρ ἔστιν μούσα καὶ ἡμῖν ἢ προσομιλεῖ σοφίας ἔνεκεν, sc. ταῖς γυναιξίν. The Medea was brought out B. C. 431, the year after the passing of the Megaric Decree.

the 'idle stories.' The poet expressly says¹ that the decree was passed διὰ τὰς λαϊκαστροφίας, and we are left to conclude from the context that it was by Aspasia's persuasion and influence that the measure was adopted.

Ranke² regards the Acharnians as "oratio quaedam popularis in theatro habita," to show the folly of the war advocated and promoted by Cleon. Aristophanes, as the personal enemy of Cleon, and as disliking the war in common with a large part of the Athenian populace³, was sure to take up the theme with energy, and to treat it with genius and biting sarcasm. His satire on the embassies⁴ to the Persian court and to Thrace must have been most telling.

The division of the Chorus into two conflicting parties (ῥημυχόρια), the one convinced of the blessings of peace, the other at first full of vengeance against the Spartans, is a device of the poet's similarly employed in the Wasps, where Philocleon and his son discuss at length the merits and demerits of the office of Dicast. The subject is thus as it were ventilated, and arguments in themselves unpopular with one party are made to seem natural, and so to obtain a hearing, when expressed by an adversary. In the present play, those for peace and justice of course prevail, and thus the sturdy old charcoal-burners, who began by pelting the peace-making farmer, eventually¹ compliment him as φρόνιμος and ὑπέρσοφος, and join in singing the praises of the goddess Διαλλαγή, to whose charms they had so long and so unaccountably been strangers. And not only the Chorus, but the Δῆμος have altered their views on the subject of a truce with Sparta².

Beside the Chorus of old men, Μαραθωνομάχαι as they call themselves³, thereby showing their fighting proclivities from early training, there appears to have been a kind of secondary or reserve Chorus⁴, who represented successively the *Οδομαντι*⁵, the regiment of Lamachus⁶, and the attendants of the Boeotian⁷. It is certain that these actually appeared on the stage; and though we cannot tell in what numbers, it is likely that they were considerable, especially as τῶν λόχων is in the plural⁸.

On the whole, the Acharnians must be regarded as an exceedingly important play in its illustration of a most critical¹ period of Attic history. The statements of Thucydides nearly always agree with those of the poet; and if we make some allowances for the ill-feeling which both of them entertained for personal reasons against Cleon, we must conclude that we have in the main a right account of the combined causes of one of the longest, cruellest, and most unreasonable wars that were ever recorded.

perhaps introduced to ridicule

the Ionic patois of some ῥήτωρ. So χαίρησεν, Equit. 235, χαίρησων, Vesp. 186. Compare ἀλγηδών, ἀχθηδών.

5. ἐγὼ δ'. 'Ah! I know what I was delighted at in my heart when I saw it,—those five talents which Cleon had to disgorge. At that (lit. them) how I brightened up! and how I love those cavaliers for this deed, for 'tis deserving (of love) from Hellas!' Cleon, it seems, had been impeached for δωροδοκία, and compelled to give up a bribe to a large amount which he had received from certain ρησιῶται to secure for them a remission or diminution of the tribute. So much the Schol. relates, on the authority of Theopompus; but we have no explicit account of the transaction. It seems alluded to in Equit. 1148, where Demos says he keeps his eye on thieves, and compels them πάλιν ἐξεμεῖν ἅττ' αὖν κεκλόφωσι. (Cf. Plaut. Curc. 688, 'sta sis ilico atque argentum propere propera vomere.') To this action of the Ἴππεις against Cleon was doubtless due the selection of the title of the 'Knights' for the play which, it appears from v. 300, the author was even now composing.

7. ἐγανώθην. Vesp. 612, τοῦτοισιν ἐγὼ γάνυμαι (the causal dative, whence Elmsley would here read τούτοις ἐγ.). Il. XIII. 493, γάννυται δ' ἄρα τε φρένα ποιμήν. Plat. Phaedr. p.

234 D (in allusion to the name Φαῖδρος), ἐμοὶ ἐδόκει γάνυσθαι ὑπὸ τοῦ λόγου μεταξὺ ἀναγιγνώσκων.

8. ἄξιον γάρ. Supply τοὔργον as the subject, and φιλίας as the object. The construction, which the editors have generally misunderstood, is the regular one with the genitive and dative, as Eur. Hec. 309, ἡμῖν δ' Ἀχιλλεύς ἄξιος τιμῆς γύναι. Inf. 205, τῇ πόλει γὰρ ἄξιον, 'for 'tis worth the city's while.' ib. 633, φησὶν δ' εἶναι πολλῶν ἀγαθῶν ἄξιος ὑμῖν ὁ ποιητής. The clause here is a quotation from the Telephus of Euripides, κακῶς ὀλοῖτ' αὖν, ἄξιον γὰρ Ἑλλάδι (where τοῦ ὀλέθρου was probably meant). The Schol. rightly supplies τὸ καταδικασθῆναι τὸν Κλέωνα, which virtually = τοὔργον.

9. ἀλλὰ κ.τ.λ. 'But then on the other hand there was another matter that pained me about the tragic performances,—when I sat gaping expecting the great Aeschylus, and then the crier called out, Bring on your chorus, Theognis.' This passage shows (1) how late the plays of Aeschylus continued in full popularity. (2) That in the midst of the troubles of the war the theatre was still the solace and delight of the country-folk, as the panis et Circenses were the sole wish of the Romans. (3) That the audience assembled in the theatre had no πῶς τοῦτ' ἔσεισέ μου δοκεῖς τὴν καρδίαν;

 ἀλλ' ἕτερον ἤσθην, ἡνίκ' ἐπὶ Μόσχῳ ποτὶ

 τῆτες δ' ἀπέθανον καὶ διεστράφην ἰδῶν. 15

certain intimation beforehand what play would be acted. Twenty years later Aeschylus is made to boast in the Ranae (868) that 'his poetry had not died with him,' i.e. it was still popular on the stage.

10. The form κεχήνη is called by the Schol. Ἰακόν, 'Ionic.' He also recognises a synaeresis δὴκεχήνη, more properly an absorption or elision, δὴ' κεχήνη, as Elmsley and others read. The Attic pluperfect was (exempli gratia) τετύφη, not ἐτετύφειν.

11. Θεόγνι. He was a bad poet, nicknamed ψυχρός, which furnishes the excellent joke about the frozen rivers inf. 140. Thesm. 170, ὁ δ' αὖ Θεόγνις ψυχρὸς ὦν ψυχρῶς ποιεῖ. "Unus e triginta tyrannis, quod testatur Xenophon, Hellen II. 3, 2." Holden, Onomast. Arist. in v. (Schol. ἐκ τῶν τριάκοντα, ὃς καὶ Χίων ἐλέγετο. Cf. Ran. 970.)

12. πῶς—δοκεῖς, i.e. σφόδρα. So inf. 24. Nub. 881. Eur. Hipp. 446, τοῦτον λαβούσα πῶς δοκεῖς καθύβρισε. Our idiom is, 'You can't imagine what a shock this gave to my heart.'

13. ἐπὶ Μόσχῳ. 'Next after Moschus,' μετὰ τὸν Μόσχον, Schol. We must be content to suppose he was some bad musician. The Schol. says ὁ Μόσχος καθαρῶδὸς Ἀκραγαντί-νος. It seems far better to render ἐπὶ thus than to theorize (which was Bentley's view) on the prize of a calf being still retained for the successful composer of dithyrambs, though this is also mentioned by the Schol. (βοηλάτης διθύραμβος, Pind. Ol. XIII. 19). For the dative cf. Theocr. VI. 20, τῷ δ' ἐπὶ Δαμοίτας ἀνεβάλλετο καλὸν αἰδεῖν. There is perhaps a joke between μόσχος and βοῦς in βοιώτιον, 'to sing Cow after Calf.' Theocr. VIII. 80, τᾷ βοὶ δ' ἂ μόσχος (κόσμος ἐστί). So inf. 1022—3, βοῦς—ἀπὸ Φυλῆς ἔλαβον οἱ Βοιώτιοι.

14. Βοιώτιον, sc. νόμον, which is also to be supplied with τὸν ὄρθιον inf. This would be some popular song in the key or mode called Δωριστί. The Schol. attributes the invention of it to Terpander.

15. τῆτες. 'This very year,' opposed to the indefinite ποτέ. The event was therefore recent, the Lenaea (inf. 504) taking place in January.—διεστράφην, 'my head was turned the wrong way,' 'I got a crick in the neck from seeing it,' viz. from the sight of a performer who stood within the doorway instead of coming forward on the stage. For παρήλθε he uses in joke παρέκνυψε, a word often applied (as in Thesm. 797, Vesp. 178, Pac. 985) to the peering forth, or putting the head out, from a ὅτε δὴ παρέκνυψε Χαῖρις ἐπὶ τὸν ὄρθιον.

 ἀλλ' οὐδεπώποτ' ἐξ ὅτου ἡ γὰρ ῥύπτομαι

 ὡς νῦν, ὅπότε οὔσης κυρίας ἐκκλησίας ἐωθινῆς ἔρημος ἡ πυνὺς αὐτῇ· 20 οἱ δ' ἐν ἀγορᾷ λαλοῦσι, κᾶνω καὶ κάτω τὸ σχοινίον φεύγουσι τὸ μεμιλτωμένον· οὐδ' οἱ πρυτάνεις ἤκουσιν, ἀλλ' ἄωριαν half-opened door or window. Some, in regard to ιδῶν, and comparing Equit. 175, εὐδαιμονήσω δ' εἰ διαστραφήσομαι; translate 'I was made to squint.' But the meaning even of that passage is ambiguous; and Av. 174, 5 is in favour of the former rendering.—Χαῖρις, some dull droner on the pipes. Inf. 866, Χαιριδῆς βομβαύλιοι. Cf. Pac. 951. Av. 858.

17. Again the poet uses his favourite form of expression παρὰ προσδοκίαν. Instead of 'never, since I attended any meeting, was I so stung with grief in my heart,' he says 'never, since I washed myself, did I so smart in my eyes from the soap-suds,'—κονία, potash, or lees, got from wood-ashes, and used as an alkali at the bath, where it was often adulterated with cinder-dust, Ran. 711, ὅπόσοι κρητοῦσι κεκηπιτέχθρον ψευδολίτρου κονίας καὶ Κιμωλίας γῆς ('fuller's earth'). Lysist. 470, ἡμᾶς ἔλουσαν—ἀνευ κονίας. There is no allusion whatever to the dust in the place of assembly (Green). The words are probably a joke on ὑπὸ γ' ἀνίας τὰς φρένας. Cf. 36. Schol. δέον εἰπεῖν ὑπὸ λύπης τὴν καρδίαν, ὡς καὶ ἐν ἀρχῇ ἔφη, ὑπὸ κονίας τὰς ὀφρῦς εἶπεν. This play on δμοια ὀνόματα in Aristophanes is often quite overlooked. Cf. 141.

19. κυρίας, 'regular,' in contrast with συγκλήτων, 'extraordinary.'—ἐωθινῆς, 'to be held at dawn.' The early attendance at the Pnyx is often mentioned with satire, e.g. Vesp. 31. Eccles. 85.

21. οἱ δέ. 'And there are the people in the agora, talking, and running up and down to get out of the way of the ruddled rope.' He looks down to the valley of the agora, and sees a performance going on, which appears to have caused some fun, the marking of idlers and loiterers (ἀγοραῖοι) with a red rope, in order to impose some fine for non-attendance. Eccles. 378, καὶ δῆτα πολὺν ἡ μίλτος, ὃ Ζεῦ φίλτατε, γέλων παρέσχεν, ἣν προσέρραινον κύκλῳ, where the sprinkling of red powder rather than the contact with a rope seems to be described.

23. ἄωριαν, ὀψέ, like ἄωρι νυκτῶν, Eccles. 741. The accusative is used as in ῶραν, Aesch. Eum. 109. Eur. Bacch. 724.—εἴτα δ', as if ἤξουσιν had preceded, by a not uncommon idiom. Mr Green is wrong in supplying an ellipse of ἤκουσιν.

 στένω, κέχνηνα, σκορδινῶμαι, πέρδομαι, 30
 ἀπορῶ, γραφῶ, παρατίλλομαι, λογίζομαι,

See Equit. 392. Av. 674. Lysist. 560. Aesch. Ag. 97. Xen. Anab. vi. 6, 16, χαλεπὸν εἰ οἰόμενοι ἐν τῇ Ἑλλάδι καὶ ἐπαίνου καὶ τιμῆς τεύξεσθαι, ἀντὶ δὲ τούτων οὐδ' ὅμοιοι τοῖς ἄλλοις ἐσύμεθα. Soph. frag. 563, γῆς ἐπιψαύσαντα καὶ ὑπὸ στέγῃ πυκνῆς ἀκοῦσαι ψακάδος. Thus Dobree's inelegant εἶτα διωστιοῦνται, adopted by Meineke (ed. 1) and Holden, is quite needless.—ὥστιοῦνται, 'they will push and jostle each other to get the first seat on the wood.' Inf. 844, οὐδ' ὥστιεῖ Κλεωνύμφ. Lysist. 330, δούλαισιν ὥστιζομένη. The stone steps beneath the bema in the Pnyx were occupied by the Πρόεδροι, who sat facing the people (Eccl. 87), and they would seem to have been covered by a wooden plank, the upper one being called πρώτον ξύλον, by a popular joke, perhaps, on προεδρία. Meineke, by a tasteless alteration, reads ἐλθόντες ἀλλήλοισι περὶ τοῦ πρώτου ξύλου. The context shows that the first comers took the best seats.

26. καταρρέοντες. 'Pouring in crowds down the steep bank.' One side of the Pnyx was cut out of the hill, after the usual fashion of amphitheatres, while the lower side was walled up with stone, whence its name from πυκνοὶ λίθοι.

This jumping down the declivity is aptly described by καταρρεῖν, a metaphor from a cataract. But none of the commentators rightly explain it. Meineke, followed by Müller and Dr Holden, reads ἄθροοι, Suidas in v. having ἄθροοι. Schol. δασύνειν δὲ τὴν πρώτην συλλαβὴν Ἀττικῶς.

26. εἰρήνη δέ. 'But how peace is to be brought about, they care nought,' i. e. in comparison with their own convenience in coming when they choose, and sitting in the best position.—ὦ πόλις, said as if in despair of the citizens, and in contrast with his own diligence and early arrival for business.—πρώτιστος, 'the very first,' viz. ὡς ἐρῶν εἰρήνης.—νοστῶν, 'making visits to,' Schol. ἀπλῶς ἐπὶ τοῦ ἐρχόμενος καὶ ἐπανερχόμενος.

30. σκορδινῶμαι, 'I yawn.' Ran. 922, τί σκορδινᾷ καὶ δυσφορεῖς;—γράφω, sc. ὑπομνήματα, 'make notes.'—παρατίλλομαι, 'I pull my whiskers,' an action of perplexity or impatience. The word occurs Plut. 168 and elsewhere in a somewhat different sense.—λογίζομαι, 'I reckon up the costs of the war.'

ἀποβλέπων εἰς τὸν ἀγρόν, εἰρήνης ἐρῶν, στυγῶν μὲν ἄστν, τὸν δ' ἐμὸν δῆμον ποθῶν, ὃς οὐδεπώποτ' εἶπεν, ἄνθρακας πρίω, 35

 ἀλλ' αὐτὸς ἔφερε πάντα χῶ πρίων ἀπῆν.
 νῦν οὖν ἀτεχνῶς ἥκω παρεσκευασμένος βοῶν, ὑποκρούειν, λοιδορεῖν τοὺς ῥήτορας, οὐκ ἠγόρευεν; τοῦτ' ἐκεῖν' οὐγὰρ ἔλεγον·

 εἰς τὴν προεδρίαν πᾶς ἀνὴρ ὥστίζεται.

32. ἀποβλέπων. 'Looking wistfully towards the country.' The citizens were now cooped up in the city, by the order and according to the policy of Pericles, Thuc. II. 14. This not only made provisions and fuel dear, but created a difficulty in finding lodgings (Equit. 793) and caused a scarcity of clothes and other necessities of life (Equit. 881. Pac. 686) as well as ultimately the fatal plague.

33. στνγῶν μὲν. The Schol. says this verse is ἐκ τραγωδίας. But it is not unlike a διττογραφία or various reading of the preceding verse. See on 96.

34. πρίω, i.e. πρίασο (aorist imper.). The dearth of charcoal is alluded to. Hence ἐγὼ ἄνθρακας παρέξω inf. 891. The demus or ward to which Dicaeopolis professes to belong, Χολλῇ or Χολλαῖδαι (inf. 406) was, perhaps, like Acharnae, well supplied with charcoal, and had no need to buy it in the market. 'It never saw want,' he adds, with a rather poor pun, 'but it produced everything of itself, and that saw was far away.' For τὸ πρίω, 'the word buy,' he substitutes ὁ πρίων, expressive of laceration to the feelings. Müller thinks τὸν ἐμὸν δῆμον must mean Acharnae, since that was specially famed for its charcoal. The Schol. too says ἦν γὰρ ὁ Δικαιόπολις Ἀχαρνεύς. ἥδει gives a better sense, and has more MS. authority than ἥδην, the reading of Elmsley and Dindorf. ἥδη is the more correct form of the first person; and this is Meineke's reading.

37. ἀτεχνῶς, 'having quite made up my mind,' 'having fully resolved.'

40. ἀλλὰ γὰρ, i.e. ἀλλὰ πανστέον· οἶδε γὰρ κ.τ.λ. 'Here come the Prytanes (the Proedri from the Βουλῇ) at noon.' An hyperbole for 'late,' the meeting being ἐωθινή, 20.

42. ὥστίζεται, sup. 24. The scene is acted in the orchestra, into which the magistrates enter σποράδην, the θυμέλην for the time representing the bema.

43. εἰς τὸ πρόσθεν. 'Pass on to the front; pass on, I say, that you may be within the consecrated boundary.' This formula was used by the crier to bring the people nearer to the speaker, and so as to stand within the line, or magic circle, which had been sprinkled by way of lustration, ominis gratia, with the blood of a pig. Cf. Eccl. 128, ὁ περιστάρχος, περιφέρειν χρὴ τὴν γαλῆν. πάριτ' εἰς τὸ πρόσθεν. Equit. 751, ἀλλ' ὥς τὸ πρόσθε χρὴ παρῆναι εἰς τὴν πύκνα.

45. Amphitheus, a sort of demi-god, as the name implies, introduced for the purpose of representing an impossible speed, and also, as it would seem, for ridiculing the prologues of Euripides, and perhaps the pedigree of Socrates, comes suddenly in, and asks whether any one has yet come forward as a speaker. This is followed by the usual invitation of the crier, to any citizen (exclusive of ξένοι and ἄτιμοι) to address the meeting. See Eccl. 130. Thesm. 379.

46. τίς ὢν. 'Well, who are you?' The question has reference to his qualification as a speaker, and we may suppose it was commonly put to any one seldom seen in the assembly.—οὐκ ἄνθρωπος; 'What, not born of man?' He infers this from the name, 'god-like from both parents.' The word is jocosely coined from the more familiar ἡμίθεος.

47. Δῆμητρος. The Schol. supplies ιερεὺς, not ἐκγονος. But it was the descent that made him immortal. The metre of this verse is very awkward, and it is not clear whether the initial α in ἀθάνατος is long or short, and so also in 51, and Av. 1224. In 53 it must be long, unless we read with Brunck ἀλλ' ὦν ἀθάνατος. Here Elmsley proposed ἀλλ' ἀθάνατός γ', so that the verse may begin with a dactyl. Meineke considers Ἀμφίθεος corrupt. We might read, ἀλλ' εἰμ' ἀθάνατος, Ἀμφίθεος, Δημητρὸς ὦν κ.τ.λ.

49. Phaenarete was the name of the mother of Socrates, Plat. Theaet. p. 149, where she is said to have been a midwife. Comparing this passage with Nub. 137, καὶ φροντίδ' ἐξήμβλωκας ἐξευρημένην, we may fairly surmise that some satire is intended on the philosopher's low birth. Κελεὸς, see Hom. Hymn. in Cer. 184. Ovid. 52. σπονδὰς ποιέσθαι, i.e. σπένδεσθαι. Elmsley's alteration, ποιῆσαι, though adopted by Meineke, Müller, and Dr Holden, has little probability. In 57, the active is rightly used with the direct object ἡμῖν. But it is unnecessary to contrast the middle here, used in a periphrastic expression (like ἐργῆν, μνήμην ποιέσθαι &c.), with the active, where the modus loquendi is not the same. See inf. 131, 268. Av. 1599. Lysist. 950, ἀλλ' ὅπως, ὦ φίλτατε, σπονδὰς ποιέσθαι ψηφιεῖ. Thesm. 1160, εἰ βούλεσθε τὸν λοιπὸν χρόνον σπονδὰς ποιῆσθαι πρὸς ἐμέ, νυνὶ πάρα. See also Thuc. i. 28 fin.

53. ἀθάνατος ὢν. Either 'because I am immortal (and so do not seem to require it),' or 'though I am immortal (and deserve better treatment).' The Schol. refers οὐκ ἔχω to the poverty caused by the war.—ἐφόδια, 'journey-money,' allowance for going to Sparta to make peace. The satire, of course, is directed at the indifference of the authorities in making peace. Inf. 130, Dicaeopolis gives Amphitheus eight drachmas (five shillings) out of his own means. The satire was felt by the authorities, for the bowmen (police on guard in the assembly) are summoned by the crier to drag away the speaker. Müller remarks "tacere iubetur Amphitheus, quia de pace loquitur." This is somewhat confirmed by what follows. Dicaeopolis mounts the bema, and protests against a citizen being removed because he wished to speak about a truce. ὅστις ἤθελε, cum voluerit. Nub. 578, δαιμόνων ἡμῖν μόναίς οὐ θύετ' οὐδὲ σπένδετε, αἵτινες τηροῦμεν ὑμᾶς,—where ὡς ἐχρήν must be supplied. Cf. inf. 645.

55. περιόψεσθε, sc. οὕτως ἀπαγόμενον, or ἐλκόμενον. Thesm. 697, τοῦ μόνου τέκνου με περιόψεσθ' ἀποστερουμένην;

59. κάθησο, σίγα, Meineke and Holden, after Bergler; but the vulgate is fully as good.

60. πρυτανεύσητε, 'unless you allow me to speak about peace.' The more common term is χρηματίζειν, 'to give leave to bring on a measure,' Meineke has πρυτανεύητε. The aorist expresses the complete and final concession.

61. The herald here ushers in certain (pretended) ambassadors from the Persian Court. The scene following is brilliantly witty; the exposure of political incompetence, of fraud, delay, and reckless expense in πρεσβεῖαι, as well as of intrigues with the hated Persian court, is complete, though greatly overdrawn by the natural licence of comedy.

62. ποῖον. Soinf. 109, 'King indeed! For my part (ἐγώ, emphatic) I'm sick of envoys, as well as of your peacocks and your specious pretences.'—τάως, τάφως, pavo. Some editors give ταῶσι, others ταῷσι, which latter seems the correct form, though not sanctioned by MSS.

64. τοῦ σχήματος. 'What a dress!' A genitive of exclamation not uncommon in Aristophanes, e. g. Av. 61, Ἄπολλον ἀποτρόπαιε, τοῦ χασμήματος. Equit. 144, ὦ Πόσειδον τῆς τέχνης. Inf. 87, τῶν ἀλαζονεμάτων. ib. 575, ὦ Λάμαχ' ἥρως, τῶν λόφων καὶ τῶν λόχων. Vesp. 161 &c.

66. φέροντας, 'getting.' So

Oed. Col. 5, τοῦ σμικροῦ δ' ἔτι μείον φέροντα. Two drachmas, or eighteen pence, per day, for an ambassador, was a small enough pay; but for eleven years (Euthymenes was Archon B.C. 437) the sum total was considerable. Müller well compares Dem. de Fals. Leg. p. 390, τρεῖς μῆνας ὅλους ἀποδηήσαντες καὶ χιλίας λαβόντες δραχμὰς ἐφόδιον παρ' ὑμῶν, where the whole sum is mentioned which was assigned for ten πρέσβεις, a little over a drachma each per diem.

68. καὶ δῆτα, 'and I can tell you.' Of. 142, Vesp. 13, καὶ δῆτ' ὄναρ θαυμαστὸν εἶδον ἀρτίως. The MSS. give διὰ τῶν Καῦστρίων πεδίων, but the Rav. MS. has παρὰ for διὰ. This shows that the preposition is an insertion. 'We pined for those fair plains by the Caÿster,' like σοῖ τρυχόμεθ' ἤδη, Pac. 989.—ἐσκηνημένοι, 'sheltered from the sun, as we reposed comfortably on well-stuffed carriages, poor wretches that we were!' The last word, homines perditī, is an admirable satire on the easy way in which the task was performed. The σκηναὶ τροχήλατοι of Aesch. Pers. 1001 seem to be meant,— probably the cars with umbrellas, so often seen in Assyrian sculptures. The ἄρμαμαξα was properly a car used for conveying women, and like the Roman carpentum fitted with comfort and elegance.

71. ἐσωζόμεν. Said aside and in bitter irony. 'Aye! no doubt I was particularly well off, who had to lie on a straw mat by the battlement!' i.e. as guard on some wall. The verb is used in contrast with ἀπολλύμενοι, and κατακείμενος is purposely repeated. For γὰρ Meineke reads τᾶρ', much to the detriment of the metre, and with no improvement to the sense. Müller and Dr Holden give σφόδρα γ' ἄρ' with Brunck. (The Schol. has ἐσωζόμεν ἄρα ἐγὼ, but only by his own way of bringing out the sense.)—φορυτῷ, cf. inf. 927. The στιβάς, or bed of leaves; moss, &c. was much the same thing; see Pac. 348, Thuc. vii. 28, ἀντὶ τοῦ πόλις εἶναι φρούριον κατέστη πρὸς γὰρ τῇ ἐπάλλξει τὴν μὲν ἡμέραν κατὰ διαδοχὴν οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι φυλάσσοντες ἑταλαιπωροῦντο.

73. πρὸς βίαν. Another stroke of satire, as if to enhance the hardship, again spoken aside.

76. ἄρα, nonne. 'O city of dolts, don't you see how these envoys are mocking you?' Κραναὰ, an old epithet derived from the rock on which the ancient city stood. Similarly πάτερ ἡμέτερε Κρονίδη, Vesp. 652. Cf. Lysist. 480, ὅτι βουλούμενοί ποτε τὴν Κραναὰν κατέλαβον.

78. πλεῖστα. Tac. Ann. xi. 16, 'saepius vinolentiam ac libidines, grata barbaris, usurpans.' Ran. 740, πῶς γὰρ οὐχὶ γεννάδας, ὅστις γε πίνειν οἶδε καὶ βινεῖν μόνον; The reading here is somewhat doubtful, the MSS. having καταφαγεῖν τε καὶ πιεῖν. Elmsley reads δυνατούς.

79. ἡμεῖς δέ. Scil. ἄνδρας ἡγοῦμεθα. 'We are no better than the Persians in our estimate of the manly character. With us the greatest beast makes the greatest man.'—ἀνὴρ often has the sense of 'a man indeed,' as in Equit. 179. Soph. Oed. Col. 393.

81. στρατιὰν λαβών. The most ordinary domestic matters must be performed by his Persian majesty with state ceremony and consequent delay. The 'golden mounts' (with a not very refined allusion) have primary reference to Persian wealth. Ran. 483, ὦ χρυσοῖ θεοί, ἐνταῦθ' ἔχεις τὴν καρδίαν;

83. πόσου χρόνου. 'And pray how long was it before he concluded that business?' For this genitive of time with an interrogative cf. Aesch. Ag 269, ποίου χρόνου δὲ καὶ πεπύορηται πόλις;—πρωκτὸν, παρ' ὑπόνοιαν for τὸν στρατὸν (Schol.).

84. τῇ πανσελήνῳ. A joke on the selection of a well-omened day for making an expedition. Elmsley gives these words interrogatively to Dicaeopolis.—καὶτα, as εἴτα next following, marks the stages of delay and the succession of domestic events before any political business could be transacted.

85. ἔλους ἐκ κριβάνου. 'Roasted whole in (taken out of) the oven.' This would seem, from Herod. i. 133, to have really been a Persian custom; on birthdays, says the historian, οἱ εὐδαίμονες αὐτῶν βοῦν καὶ ἵππων καὶ κάμηλον καὶ ὄνον προτιθέεται, ὅλους ὀπτοὺς ἐν καμίνοισι. Ran. 506, βοῦν ἀπηνθράκιζ' ὄλον.

86. καὶ τίς. 'Why, surely no one ever yet saw oxen baked in an oven!' i.e. though ἄρτος κριβανίτης is common enough. Cf. inf. 1123.

88. ὄρνιν. There seems an allusion to a 'peacock-feast.'—τριπλάσιον, 'thrice as big as,' triplo maiorem; on which notion of comparison the genitive depends. Equit. 718, αὐτὸς δ' ἐκείνου τριπλάσιον κατέσπακας.—Κλεωνύμου, a big burly coward, often satirized as a shield-dropper. He is called μέγας in Vesp. 592, δειλὸν καὶ μέγα in Av. 1477.

89. φέναξ, 'humbug,'—a play, perhaps, on φοῖνιξ.

90. ταῦτ' ἄρα. 'So this is the way in which you humbugged us, with your two drachmas a-day!' See on 990.

91. Ψευδαρτάβαν, 'Sham-Artabas,' is a clever compound in imitation of Persian names commencing with ἀρτ, as Ἀρτεμself a genuine one (Aesch. Pers.

into ridicule by the use of a mask like the face of a Cyclops.

95. ναύφρακτον βλέπεις; 'Art

The joke turns on the man's mask, on which was painted a huge eye, and this is compared to the eye on the prows of boats (Aesch. Suppl. 716), by which they were supposed to see their way into harbour (πρῶρα quasi α προρᾶν). There is probably a double sense in βλέπεις, 'do you see the coast lined with ships?' and 'you look quite naval!' or 'like one who has a fleet to protect him,' i.e. like the holes in the sides of a trireme from which the oars are extended. Cf. Equit. 567, πεζαῖς

96. νεώσοικον, 'a dock-yard,'
viz. to be repaired in. Mr Hailstone suggests that this line is a variant on the preceding.

97. ἄσκωμα. The leather flap was so called which kept the water out of the port-hole.
Hesych. δερμάτιον δ' ἐν ταῖς τριήhas got up a few words intended to sound like Persian, but which appear in fact to be broken Greek. Mr Walsh renders it "Him just-enow begin to pitchoney Unzoundy;" and the words may be taken to mean that the King is patching up some old ships to send aid to the Athenians, or that he advises them to do the same to their own navy. The reading ἀναπίσσειναι, however, has no MSS. authority; most copies have ἐξαρχᾶν ἀπίσσειναι, Rav. ἐξαρχας πῖσσιναι.

101. ὃ λέγει, viz. that a fleet is coming to aid you. But φησὶν, 'he says,' seems in fact to mean 'he has to say,'—unless the joke turns on the arbitrary interpretation of the above words. Nothing in the former verse alludes to gold, while οὐ λήψι χρῦσο, "no gettey goldey" (Walsh), by a facetious mistake, negatives the very promise the envoy was instructed to give. Dicaeopolis, however, especially notices the οὐ, and takes it as a definite refusal.

104. Ἰᾶον αἶ, Schol., who takes it for a barbaric pronunciation of οὐ. It may mean 'a second time,' as you have done before. Commonly, Ἰαοναῦ, which Meineke thinks should be retained. The form Ἰαόνων (gen.) occurs in Aesch. Pers. 1011.

106. χαυνοπρώκτους really means χαυνοπολίτας (inf. 635), vain and puffed up with conceit.

108. ἀχάνας, meant to be the true interpretation of χαῦνος in the compound, refers to a Persian measure of 45 medimni. Hesych. ἀχάνας· τινὲς μὲν Περσικὰ μέτρα, Φανόδημος δὲ κίστας, εἰς αὐτὰς κατετίθεντο τοὺς ἐπισιτισμοὺς οἱ ἐπὶ θεωρίας στελλόμενοι.

109. ποίας. See 62.

111. πρὸς τουτονί. Some understand ἑμάντα, and supply βλέπων, 'keeping your eye on this strap, that I may not (viz. if you lie) flog you scariet.' Or (with Reiske, who is followed by Meineke, Müller, and Holden) πρὸς τουτονί, ego te adiuro per hanc scuticam. The Schol. explains it, 'tell it to me here;' ἀντὶ τοῦ, πρὸς ἑμαυτίν, but this should rather be πρὸς τόνδε. It

ἵνα μὴ σε βάψω βάμμα Σαρδιανικόν seems simpler to take τουτονὶ for the ambassador, who has introduced Pseudartabas. 'Tell me plainly, and look your master in the face, that I may not flog you.' Thus we may supply τετραμμένος.—Σαρδιανικόν, the φοινικίς or red dye made from the Kermes oak, at Sardis. Pac. 1173, τοὺς λόφους ἔχοντα καὶ φοινικίῳ δέξειαν πᾶν, ἣν ἐκεῖνος φησὶν εἶναι βάμμα Σαρδιανικόν.

113. At the question here asked, 'Will the King send us money?' the man shakes his head; at the next, 'Are we then deceived?' he nods assent. In the MSS. ἀνανεύει and ἐπινεύει are added as stage notes (παρεπιγραφαί) to these verses respectively. See Aesch. Eum. 117 seqq.

115. ἄνδρες. The plural may indicate that the envoy and Pseudartabas were acting in collusion. Perhaps however the two pretended eunuchs are included, inf. 117, the envoy being avowedly an Athenian. Dicaeopolis shrewdly detects the peculiar fashion of the Greek nod of assent and dissent, and boldly asserts that they are both Athenians in disguise. By ἀνανεύειν a throwing back of the head was expressed (which is said to be the custom of some modern Greeks), the contrary motion, ἐπινεύειν, being the same as we still use in nodding assent. See inf. 611. In Eccl. 72, κατανεύειν means 'to assent.'

116. ἐνθὲνδε, ex hac ipsa urbe.

118. ὅτι ἐστὶ Meineke, the MS. Rav. having ὅστις ἐστὶ. The change seems a bad one. The Greeks commonly say οἶδα (αὐτὸν) ὅς ἐστὶ, but οὐκ οἶδα τίς or ὅστις ἐστὶ.—Kleisthenes, a man of disreputable character, and ridiculed for shaving his beard (Equit. 1374. Nub. 355. Thesm. 235, 575. Ran. 48, 422), is here chosen as about the last man who should play the part of a eunuch, since eunuchs do not grow beards at all.

119. The MSS. give ἐξευρημένε, and the Schol. quotes ὦ θερμόβουλον σπλάγχχνον as from the Medea of Euripides, where the words do not occur.

120. τὸν πάγων' ἔχων. The joke consists in his having no beard, because he had shaved it off. The Schol. says this is a parody on a verse of Archilochus, ending with τὴν πυγὴν εὐνοῦχος ἡμῖν ἦλθες ἐσκευασμένος;

ἔχων. The same applies to Strato, who is mentioned as ἀγένης together with Kleisthenes in Equit. 1374. Both here are satirised for their effeminate look.

125. ἀγχόνη, i.e. ἀγχόνης ἀξία. At these words the pretended envoys leave the stage.

126. κᾶπειτα κ.τ.λ. 'And so, it seems, I have to dally and waste the day here, while they are never kept waiting at the door for their dinner.' Such seems the sense, though the words are rather obscure, and it appears best to omit the note of interrogation usually placed at στραγγεύομαι.—ἴσχει, sc. τὴν βδελήν τοῦ ξενίζειν πρέσβεις. Cf. Nub. 131, τί ταῦτ' ἔχων στραγγεύομαι, ἄλλ' οὐχὶ κόπτω τὴν θύραν; There is some probability in the conjecture of Blaydes, τοὺς δὲ ξενίζει (sc. ἢ βουλή) κούδέποτε ἴσχει τῇ θύρᾳ, the ablative being the usual construction; see on Aesch. Cho. 560, and Vesp. 334,

775. Exclusus fore, Hor. Sat. 1. 2. 67. The Schol. however quotes from Eupolis νῆ τὸν Ἰσοειδῶ, οὐδέποτε ἴσχει ἡ θύρα.

128. δεινὸν ἔργον, viz. the making a truce, or rather, perhaps, a special truce.

130. ἐμοὶ σύ. Both words are emphatic. 'I will have a truce, if the rest will not; and you shall make it for me, since the ambassadors have failed.'—ὀκτῶ δραχμαῖς, a small ἐφόδιον, (sup. 53, 66) in contrast with the money wasted by the πρέσβεις, v. 67.

131. ποιήσον Elmsley, Meineke, Holden, Müller against the MSS. See on 52. The ἐμοὶ may be the dative after λαβὼν.

132. τῇ πλάτιδι, i.e. τῇ ἀλόχῳ, from πελάζειν. Hesych. πλάτις· γυναῖκα—πλατίς· ἡ γυνή. Equally rare terms for a wife are τάλις (Soph. Ant. 629) and the Homeric δαρ, said to be connected with εἶρεν.

τοῦτον μετὰ Σιτάλκους ἔπινον τὸν χρόνον

133. ὑμεῖς, sc. οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι. 'Do you go on sending envoys and gaping like fools,' viz. with stolid admiration of Persian wealth and parade. The MSS. and the Schol. give κεχήνατε, the imperative of the perfect, but Elmsley and others read κεχήνετε (the present imp. from a reduplicated form κεχήνω), on the authority of Herodian ap. Bekk. Anecd. p. 1287; and this is better suited to the context, which implies duration.

134. Θέωρος. This is the man who is in several places satirised as a κόλαξ, Vesp. 42, 599, 1236, and a perjurer, Nub. 400. It may be doubted if he was really an envoy to Thrace; it was enough to hold him up as an ἀλαζών, 'an impostor,' like the other πρέσβεις.—Σιτάλκους, from Sitalces son of Teres, and king of the Thracian Odrysae. He had made a treaty with the Athenians B.C. 431, and they in return had presented his son Sadoeus with the citizenship (inf. 145). See Thuc. II. 29, and IV. 101, where the death of Sitalces B.C. 424 is recorded. Theorus therefore is represented as having been absent six years, which he justly calls πολὺν χρόνον.—εἰσκηρύττεται, 'is being ushered in,' by the public crier before the Assembly.—This, like most of the remarks of Dicaeopolis, is supposed to be said aside, or indignantly addressed to himself.

136—7. πολὺν at the end of both lines has a special sense: 'the delay would not have been great if the pay had not been great.'

138. κατένιψε, 'if it had not snowed over all Thrace,'—the agent being omitted from its indefiniteness. — τὴν Θράκην ὅλην, the usual idiom, not τὴν ὅλ. Θρ. or ὅλ. τὴν Θρ. So τὴν νύχθ' ὅλην, Eccl. 39. Inf. 160. τὴν λόχμην ὅλην, Av. 224, but ὅλην τὴν νύκτα Eccl. 1099. So too ἡ πόλις πᾶσα is more common than πᾶσα ἡ πόλις.

140. ἐνθαδὶ, here at Athens; so that his ψυχρότης as a tragic poet (sup. 11) exercised a physical effect at a great distance. An excellent joke, not at all improved by assigning the sentence ὑπ' αὐτὸν κ.τ.λ. to Dicaeopolis, with Nauck, Meineke, Holden, and Müller. The envoy, having returned, may be supposed to know the dates of both events.

141. ἔπινον. He should have καὶ δῆτα φιλαθήναιος ἦν ὑπερφυῶς, ὑμῶν τ' ἐραστῆς ἦν ἀληθῆς, ὥστε καὶ

 ἐν τοῖσι τοίχοις ἔγραφ', Ἀθηναῖοι καλοί.

said ἔπρασσον, 'I was transacting business,' 'but he changes the word in reference to the Thracia amystis, Hor. Carm. i. 36. 14. Eur. Rhes. 419. As the singular is here used, but the plural in 136, Müller follows Blaydes in his needless alteration οὐκ ἀπῆν ἄν (which is defensible, though the Greeks prefer οὐκ ἄν ἀπῆν), and Meineke proposes (but fortunately does not adopt) χρόνον μὲν οὐκ ἔγωγ' ἄν ἢ 'ν Θράκη πολύν. There is not the slightest difficulty in the plural. Every ambassador would have some attendants at least, if there were not several πρέσβεις.

142. καὶ δῆτα. 'And indeed;' 'and I can tell you,' &c. Cf. 68. Eccl. 378. Soph. Ant. 449, καὶ δῆτ' ἐτόλμας τοῖσδ' ὑπερβαίνειν νόμους; i.e. κάπειτα, 'and did you nevertheless,' &c.

143. ἀληθῆς, σαφῆς, a true and sincere friend. A satire, perhaps, on a somewhat questionable alliance, the proof of the sincerity consisting in scribbling on the walls 'Athens for ever!' A. Müller, while he reads ἀληθῶς on Dobree's conjecture (ὡς ἀληθῶς), well compares Eur. Suppl. 867, φίλος τ' ἀληθῆς ἦν φίλοις. Dr Holden also follows Dobree.

144. καλοί. On Greek vases we not unfrequently find a figure with a name and καλή or καλὸς added in compliment. Lovers used thus to express their sentiments on walls or doors; cf. Vesp. 97.

145. ἐπεποιήμεθα, in the medial sense, 'whom we had adopted as an Athenian citizen.' See Thuc. ii. 29. His name was Teres, according to some. (Schol.)

146. φαγεῖν ἀλλᾶντας, 'to eat black-puddings,' i.e. to be present at the feast of the Apaturia, when the infant sons of citizens were enrolled in the φρατρίαι. "Apaturia hoc loco commemorantur, quum Sadocus quasi Atheniensis modo natus sit; jocus in eo potissimum quaerendus est, quod Sadocus more puerorum maxime gaudet insidiis, de quibus ei narratum est." Müller.

147. τῇ πάτρᾳ. His adopted country Athens. — ἡντιβόλει Cobet, whom Meineke, Müller and Holden follow. See on Aesch. Agam. 1116. Eum. 604.

148. ὁ δὲ, the father, Sitalces. He would bring, he said, so large a force into Attica that the Athenians should compare them to locusts. The answer of Dicaeopolis shows that he regarded Thracian auxiliaries in the light of an invading pest in so poor a land as Attica.

153. καὶ νῦν. 'And accordingly,'—a formula often used when a practical illustration is given of some assertion made. See on Aesch. Ag. 8. Prom. 287. We must suppose that a glimpse is given to the spectators of a half-clad barbarian host, supplied by a secondary or supernumerary Chorus who afterwards impersonate the λόχοι of Lamachus, inf. 575, and again the attendants on the Boeotian, 862. A similar usage prevailed in tragedy, e.g. the body-guards of Theseus and of Creon, in Oed. Col. 826, as K. O. Müller has shown in his Dissertations on the Eumenides.

154. τοῦτο μὲν. That they are μαχιμώτατοι. They show fight, perhaps, in attempting to get the provisions of Dicaeopolis, an attack which he compares to locusts devastating a crop, v. 164.—ἤδη, i.e. 'already' from their present action. Porson and Elmsley ἤδη, which quite alters the sense.

158. ἀποθριάζειν, 'to un-fig-leaf' (θρίον), refers to the appearance of the barbarians in an exaggerated phallic costume, ἀπεψωλημένοι, such as that described in Nub. 538. Hesych. ἀποτεθρίακεν· ἀποπεφύλλικεν, ἀπεκάθαρκεν. ἡ δὲ μεταφορὰ ἀπὸ τῶν συγκοφύλλων (συκολόγων?).

From the exploit at Salamis the epithet σωσίπολις is given.— ὑποστένοι, 'would grumble, would sigh in secret,' viz. if barbarians got better pay than themselves (four obols per diem). There is doubtless a play on the word στένειν and στεναγμός expressing (like gemitus and ingemere) the hard breathing caused by exertion. So the crew in Eur. Iph. T. 1390 rowed with all their force, στεναγμὸν ἥδυν ἐκβρυχώμενοι. In Vesp. 180 an overweighted donkey is said στένειν as he walks.

164. πορθοῦμενος. A word is used applicable to the ravages of an ἐσβολή. The custom of the country folk was to bring some slight refreshment to the assembly. Eccl. 307, ἤκεν ἕκαστος ἐν ἀσκιδίῳ φέρων πιεῖν ἅμα τ' ἄρτον καὶ δύο κρομμύω καὶ τρεῖς ἂν ἐλάας.

165. οὐ καταβαλεῖτε. 'Put those leeks down (drop them), I say!' Pac. 1124, οὐ καταβαλεῖς τὰ κώδι' ὦ θυηπόλε; There seems no reason why these words should be given to Dicaeopolis, against the MSS. and the express note of the Schol. ὁ Θέωρος ἐπιπλήττει τοῖς βαρβάροις ἀρπάξουσι τὰ σκόροδα, καὶ τῷ Δικαιοπόλει ὁμοίως ἐπιπλήττει ἐμψίζοντι αὐτοὺς.

166. οὐ μὴ πρόσει; 'Don't come near these fellows when they have been primed with garlic,' like fighting-cocks. Cf. Equit. 494, ἴν' ἄμεινον, ὦ τάν, ἐσκοροδισμένος μάχη. Ibid. 946, σὺ δ', ὦ Παφλαγῶν, φάσκων φιλεῖν μ' ἐσκορόδισας.

167. περιείδετε, περιοράτε, 'do you allow me to be so treated in my own country?' The Athenian jealousy of foreign interference is appealed to as a motive for protection.

169. ποιεῖν, 'to hold an assembly.' Equit. 746, ποιήσας αὐτίκα μάλ' ἐκκλησίαν. Thesm. 300, ἐκκλησίαν τήνδε καὶ σύνοδον τὴν νῦν κάλλιστα καὶ ἄριστα ποιῆσαι.

171. διοσημία. In a country where a casual shower of rain or a thunderstorm was less common than with us, it was regarded as a portent of sufficient moment to break up an assembly. See Nub. 582, ἦν γὰρ ἥ τις ἔξοδος μηδενὶ ξὺν νῶ, τότ' ἥ βροντῶμεν ἢ ψακάζομεν. As any citizen could assert that he had felt a drop of rain, we may presume that, as here, it was often used as a political shift.

172. εἰς ἔτην. 'The day after to-morrow.' The short interval is perhaps intended to show that the matter would be pressed. The origin of the phrase is uncertain, as also its connection with ἐνη (ἐνη) καὶ νέα, Nub. 1171, and the asper or lenis spiritus.

173. λύουσι. The pretended assembly now breaks up, and Dicaeopolis is left alone on the stage, to lament the plunder of his scant stock of provisions, which he calls μυττωτὸν, a kind of herb-pottage, Equit. 771. Pac. 273. Virg. Ecl. II. 11, 'allia serpyllumque herbas contundit olentes.'

176. πρὶν ἂν γε Brunck. Bergk μήπω γε, πρὶν γ' ἂν στῶ, the MSS. giving μήπω γε πρὶν ἂν στῶ. Dr Holden rightly rejects Meineke's "dubia emendatio" πρὶν ἂν ἐστῶ. Cf. 296. Equit. 961 πρὶν ἂν γε τῶν χρησμῶν ἀκούσης τῶν ἐμῶν. Vesp. 920, πρὶν ἂν γ ἀκούσης ἀνδ' ὀτέρων.

177. φεύγONT' ἐκφυγεῖν. See Porson on Eur. Phoen. 1231.

A. Müller compares Nub. 167, ἡ ῥαδίως φεύγων ἂν ἀποφύγοι δίκην.

178. σπονδὰς. Between the senses 'a truce' and 'samples of wine' there is an evident play. Hence ὥσφροντο, 'got scent of it,' and the γεύματα, 187, have their literal explanation. Cf. 1020, 1061.

180. στιπτοί, 'close-grained,' 'compact.' All the epithets have reference to the trade of the Acharnians as charcoal-burners. ἀτεράμονες, from root τερ, τείρειν, is used of any hard and durable substance, but especially of legumes that will not boil soft (Schol.). Cf. Vesp. 730, μηδ' ἀτενὴς ἄγαν ἀτεράμων τ' ἀνὴρ. πρίνος, 'holm-oak,' and σφένδαμνος, 'sycamore' or 'maple,' seem to have been specially used. The process is thus described in Quint. Smyrn. ix. 162, ὥς δ' ὅτ' ἂν οὐρεα μακρὰ θορῶν εἰς ἄγχεα βήσσης | ὀρυτό-μος ἐγκονέων νεοθηλέα δάμναται ὕλην, | ἀνθρακας ὄφρα κάμησι κατακρύψας ὑπὸ γαῖαν | σὺν πυρὶ δούρατα πολλὰ, τὰ δ' ἄλλοθεν ἄλλα πεσόντα | πρῶνας ὑπερθε κάλυψαν, ἀνὴρ δ' ἐπιτέρπεται ἔργῳ.

'Fighters at Marathon,' in the literal sense, they could hardly have been, unless from 85 to 90 years of age. Cf. 696.

183. τῶν ἀμπέλων. This passage shows, under some irony, the resentment felt for the ἐσβολαὶ so often inflicted on Attica by the Spartans. See particularly Pac. 628—31. Thuc. II. 21. Here again there is a play on σπονδαί,—'how can you bring wine, when the vines have been cut down?'

184. τῶν λίθων, 'some stones,' a partitive genitive.—τρίβωνας, the coarse mantle or blanket worn as a wrapper by the common people, something like the Roman pallium.

186. οἱ δ' οὖν βοώντων. 'And let them bawl.' Aesch. Prom. 956, ὁ δ' οὖν ποιέτω· πάντα προσδόκητά μοι.

188. πεντέτεις, vinum quinquenne. It is clear that two or three samples of wine are produced, one of which is rejected as too new, and tasting of turpentine (vinum picatum). At the same time the truce for five years between Athens and Sparta is alluded to for its shortness. Thuc. I. 112, ὕστερον δὲ, διαλιπόντων ἐτῶν τριῶν, σπονδαὶ γίνονται Πελοποννησίοις καὶ Ἀθηναίοις πενταετείς. πίττης, pitch being used in ship-building. Some of the Greek wines now have a slight flavour of turpentine (Graeca saliva meri, Propert. v. 8. 38). It was originally produced by lining the porous κέραμοι with melted rosin internally. A. Müller cites an interesting passage from Plutarch. Sympos. v. 5. 1, p. 768, τῇ τε γὰρ πίττῃ πάντες ἐξαλείφουσι τὰ ἀγγεῖα, καὶ τῆς ῥητίνης (resin) ὑπομιγνύουσι πολλοὶ τῷ οἴνῳ, καθάπερ Εὐβοεῖς τῶν Ἑλλαιδικῶν.—οὐ γὰρ μόνον εὐωδίαν τινα τὰ τοιαῦτα προσδίδωσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸν οἶνον εὐφυνῇ παρίστησι ταχέως ἐξαιρών τῇ θερμότητι τοῦ οἶνου τὸ νεαρὸν καὶ ὑδατώδες.

not, perhaps, historical, but a mere doubling of the rejected πεντέτης. The thirty-years' truce mentioned below is that recorded in Thuc. I. 23 and 115, which was made only to be broken.

193. ὀξύτατον, they smell very strong of envoys to the cities, as if of delay on the part of the allies, (requiring such embassies to remind them of their pledged ἐπιμαχία). In ὀξύτατον there is an allusion to the acetous fermentation of bad wine (varra).

197. μὴ ἐπιτηρεῖν. 'Not to be ever on the look-out for the odious order to the citizens, to take provisions for three days,' viz. ὡς ἐπ' ἐξόδῳ. See Pac. 151, 312. 717. Vesp. 243, ὀργῆν
(i.e. τροφὴν) ἡμερῶν τριῶν. Dr Holden transposes 197, 198, with Reiske. This seems to be no improvement, unless we further read καὶ μὴ 'πιτήρει. The infinitive is rather vaguely used, but there is no need to supply

see inf. 922. Equit. 1031, ὁπό-ταν δειπνήσῃ ἐπιτηρῶν.

198. ἐν τῷ στόματι, 'in one's mouth,' 'on the palate,' (not 'with the mouth,' Müller).

199. ἐκπίομαι, ebiam, 'I will drink to the last drop,' not merely sip it, as was done in making libations. This act implied hearty acceptance. Theocr.

chaic metre represents their hasty step and excited movements to and fro. It passes into the cretic and paeonic, (i. e. cretic with the final long syllable resolved into two short), a metre very prevalent in this play. Compare with this parodus Vesp. 230. Pac. 301. But Dicaeopolis has got safe to his house (εἰσιῶν), and the half-divine messenger contrives by his supernatural power to evade his pursuers. The rural Dionysia were held in December, whereas this play was acted at the Lenaea, in January. The celebration of the country feast we must suppose to have been postponed for a few weeks.

It seems extraordinary that Dobree should have proposed to place this verse before 201, in which Dr Holden follows him; and still more strange that Meineke should condemn as spurious 201, 2. The passage is perfectly simple as it stands, whereas the alterations make nonsense of it. The γε is without point in 203, if the verse is transposed. 'The Acharnians may do as they like; I shall have my holiday.' 'And I,' (adds Amphitheus) 'will make my escape from the enemy.' In the MSS. the persons are somewhat variously marked.

205. ἄξιον, it is worth the city's while, it is a state duty, to arrest this man. Cf. sup. 8.—μηνύσατε, addressed to no one in particular; the imaginary ὁδοίποροι, perhaps.

209. ἐκπέφενγε. Having arrived at a certain point, probably the side-passage opposite to that by which they entered, the old men suddenly stop, finding Dicaeopolis has escaped, and bewail the feebleness of age, so different from their activity in youth.

212. φέρων. 'Weighted with a sack of charcoal.' Hence the name Εὐφορίδης inf. 612.

215. ἡκολούθουν, 'kept up with.' Plat. Protag. p. 335 E, νῦν δ' ἐστὶν ὥσπερ ἂν εἰ δέοιό μου Κρίσωνι τῷ Ἰμεραίῳ δρομεῖ ἀκμάζοντι ἔπεσθαι, ἢ τῶν δολιχοδρόμων τῷ, ἢ τῶν ἡμεροδρόμων διαθεῖν τε καὶ ἔπεσθαι. Vesp.

1206, ὅτε τὸν δρομέα Φάυλλον, ὡν βούπαις ἔτι, εἶλον διώκων Λαιδορίας ψήφουν δυοῖν. Dr Holden (Onomasticon in v.) refers to Herod. viii. 47. Pausan. x. 9. 2, Plutarch. Alex. 34. Like the ὀπλιτοδρόμοι, these racers showed their strength by running heavily weighted. The adverb φαύλως seems to contain an intentional play on Φάυλλος, as A. Müller has remarked.

217. ἀπεπλίζατο, 'would have ambled away.' A rare word, used of mules in Od. vi. 318, αἱ δ' εὖ μὲν τρώχων, εὖ δὲ πλίσσοντο πόδεσσιν.

220. Λακρατείδῃ. 'Now that poor old Laceratides feels his legs heavy under him.' The word is formed like Ὑπερείδης. The MSS. give Λακρατίδῃ, and so Photius, Lex. Λακρατίδας, τὰ κατεψυγμένα· ἐπὶ γὰρ Λακρατίδα ἄρχοντος πολλὴ χιὼν ἐγένετο. Hesychius: Λακρατίδης· Ἀριστοφάνης φησὶ παλαιὸν Λακρατίδην, τὰ ψυχρὰ βουλούμενος δηλοῦν· ψυχροὶ γὰρ οἱ γέροντες. Schol. τὰ ψυχρὰ πάντα Λακρατίδου ἐκά-λουν. The word is a patronymic from Λακράτης = Λεωκράτης.

221. ἐγχάνῃ, the reading of the MSS., is much better than ἐγχάνοι, (the correction of Brunck, adopted by the later editors), since not a wish or hope, but caution lest is expressed. See on Aesch. Suppl. 351. Ag. 332. The full syntax would be σκεπτέον γὰρ μὴ ἐγχάνῃ. The sense is, 'We must not let him chuckle for having escaped from us Acharnians, though we are old.' Cf. inf. 1197, κἄτ' ἐγχανεῖται ταῖς ἐμαῖς τυχαισί.

226. There can be little doubt that the words πόλεμος ἐχθοδοπὺς αὔξεται are a parody or a quotation from some poet. Homer has ἐχθοδοπῆσαι, Il. i. 518, and the adjective occurs Soph. Aj. 932. The sense is, 'against whom a hostile war is kept up on account of my farms,' i.e. the destruction and devastation of them by ἐσβολαί.

230. οὐκ ἀνήσω. 'I will not relax my efforts (or remit my wrath) till I have stuck in them, in full front encounter, like a sharp rush, up to the very hilt, making them smart for it.' Some word has dropped out, as is shown by the metre of the strophic verse (216), but it seems vain to attempt to restore it by conjecture. The Schol. however says (on 232) ἐπειδὴ οὖν προεῖπε σκόλοψ καὶ σχοῖνος αὐτοῖς ἅτ' ἐμπαγῶ. He adds that it was the custom to conceal sharp stakes among the vines to hinder hostile attacks. Cf. Vesp. 437, εἰ δὲ μὴ τοῦτον μεθήσεις, ἐν τί σοι παγήσεται.

234. Βαλλήναδε, 'Pelt-wards,' a pun on Παλλήνη, a demus of the Antiochid tribe. Similarly Βραυρωνάδε, Pac. 874. Ἀλμοῦντάδε, Av. 496.

235. γῆν πρὸ γῆς. See Aesch. Prom. V. 658, μάστιγι θείᾳ γῆν πρὸ γῆς ἐλαύνομαι.

236. ἐμπλήμην, an Attic optative of the epic aorist, like κεκλήμην and μεμνήμην, representing the uncontracted form in -είμην. Lysist. 235, εἰ δὲ παραβαλὴν, ὕδατος ἐμπλήθ' ἡ κύλιξ. We have μεμνήμην and μεμνέωτο in Il. xxiv. 745, xxi. 361. Compare Hipp. 664, μισῶν δ' οὐποτ' ἐμπλησθήσομαι γυναιῆας.—ἐκείνον, 'that fellow,' no longer present.

238. σίγα, sc. ἔχε. A voice is heard from within, commanding solemn silence while the Bacchic procession passes. Enraged as the Chorus are at the offender, their religious feelings prevail. It is the very man they want, but he is in the performance of a solemn rite, and must not be molested. Compare Ran. 369, τοῦτοις—ἀπανδῶ ἐξίστασθαι μύσταισι χοροῖς. The procession advances on the stage, with the phallic symbol (νευρόσπαστον, and in charge of a slave) carried behind a young girl dressed in golden ornaments (259) and bearing on her head the κανοῦν, or flat open basket, which contained the implements and materials for the preliminary sacrifice. Probably a temporary altar was exhibited on the stage. The basket was taken from the head of the bearer that some of the contents might be used, as the ὀλαὶ for sprinkling on the people, Pac. 960, the roll or cake called ἐλατήρ, &c.

242. We have no right to alter the reading of all the copies into πρὸϋθ' ἐς, merely because the latter is more common, as sup. 43. A better conjecture is F. A. Wolf's πρὸτω 'ς τὸ πρόσθεν. The phrase may have meant ὥς ἐς, 'that you may get in front.' Such an alteration may be obliterating an ancient religious formula.

245. ἀνάδος, 'hand up here,' 'put into my hand.' Müller well compares ἀνδωκε οἰνοδόκον φιάλαν, Pind. Isthm. v. 39.—ἐτιήρυσιν, the ladle or spoon for pouring the ἔτνος over the cake. This was a phallic ceremony, analogous to the custom of pouring ghee over the stone pillars held in veneration by the Hindus, and the Roman custom of pouring libum over the Termini (Ovid, Fast. II. 644), the mystical meaning of which is obvious. See the note on Pax 923. The depressed circles on Celtic megalithic pillars, known as "cup-cuttings," are probably connected with these libations.

The ἐλατήρ was doubtless shaped as a phallus. So ἐλαύνειν τεῖχος, πλίνθους, &c., is used in the sense of drawing out lengthwards, producere. The same, probably, are the νεήλατα mentioned in the Bacchic worship in Dem. De Cor. p. 314 init.—καταχέω, cf. Nub. 74, ἀλλ' ἔπερόν μου κατέχεεν τῶν χρημάτων. Inf. 1040, κατάχει σὺ τῆς χορδῆς τὸ μέλι.

247. καὶ μὴν καλὸν γ' ἔστ'. 'There, that will do.' A. Müller rightly places a colon here, the infinitive following being governed by some ellipse, as of ὁδός, εὐχομαι, or ἐλπίζω, as usual in this formula. Cf. inf. 816.——κεχαρισμένως, 'in a manner acceptable to thee.' Pac. 386, εἴ τι κεχαρισμένον χοιρίδιον οἶσθα παρ' ἐμοῦ κατεδηδοκῶς. Hom. II. v. 243, xx. 298, &c.

250. τυχηρῶς, in such a way as to bring good luck on us all.

252. ξυνενεγκεῖν, ἀποβῆναι, evadere. In prayers, hopes, wishes, &c. the infinitive aorist is used in a future sense.

253. καλὴ καλῶς. Pretty as you are, carry the basket prettily; don't spoil your good looks by your awkward carriage. This seems a received formula on such occasions. So Eccl. 730 (where there is a pretended Panathenaic procession), χῶρει σὺ δεῦρο κιναχύρα καλὴ καλῶς. Pac. 1330, χῶπως μετ' ἐμοῦ καλὴ καλῶς κατακείσει.

254. θυμβροφάγον. 'Looking as if you had eaten tansy,'—as demure and with a mouth as much puckered up as if you had been eating some bitter plant. (Our word 'to rue' is said to be connected in this way with the plant.) The sense appears to be, 'don't laugh.'

255. ὀπύσει. A remarkable future of ὀπιεῖν. The allusive addresses in these phallic processions, as in epithalamia, were no doubt characteristic. One is reminded of the not very refined conversation of the Nurse with Juliet, in Shakespeare.—ἐκποιήσεται, procreabit, Pac. 707, ἐκποιῶ σαυτῷ βότρυν, where the last word, as here γαλᾶς, is used παρὰ προσδοκίαν for παῖδας.—βδεῖν, a coarse joke, illustrated by Plat. 693, βδέονσα δριμύτερον γαλῆς. A. Müller, who reads ἦττους on Elmsley's conjecture, gives a somewhat subtle explanation of the sense, which it is hardly necessary to discuss.

257. πρόβαινε, 'step along,' 'move forward.' A technical word in starting a procession. See Vesp. 230. Eccl. 285, and the note on Aesch. Eum. 983, where προβάτε must be read for the corrupt τιμάτε. Cf. inf. 262.

258. τὰ χρυσία, 'your trinkets.' Girls were dressed up on these occasions in their best finery. Av. 670, ὅσον δ' ἔχει τὸν χρυσόν, ὥσπερ παρθένος. Hom. Il. II. 872, ὅς καὶ χρυσὸν ἔχων πόλεμόνδ' ἔεν, ἥντε κούρη.—περιτράγῃ, i.e. περιέλῃται, κλέψῃ. Vesp. 596, αὐτὸς δ' ὁ Κλέων ὁ κεκραξιδάμας μόνον ἡμᾶς οὐ περιτρώγει.

259. σφῶν, viz. by you and your attendant. Dicaeopolis now finally arranges (διακοσμεῖ) the procession. He will go last, chanting the phallic song. The women are to look on from the flat roof of the house, here represented by the top of the wall behind the stage. (The idea of A. Müller, that the cottage of Dicaeopolis was built of wood on this wall, in scaenae pariete ligno extructam, seems a needless supposition.)

 πολλῷ γάρ ἐσθ' ἡδίων, ὦ Φαλλῆς Φαλλῆς, κλέπτουσαν εὐρόνθ' ὀρικὴν ὑληφόρον,
 τὴν Στρυμοδάρου Θρᾷτταν ἐκ τοῦ Φελλέως,

263. Φαλλῆς. It is probable that this is the male, and the Roman Pales was the female, divinity supposed to preside over the powers of generation. (Possibly even the Palatine hill, which Virgil tried to connect with the Arcadian Pallas, was so called from the phallic rites of the Luperci.) As the only extant specimen of a phallic hymn, this canticle is curious.

266. ἔκτω ἔτει. 'It is six years since you and I had a word to say to each other, but now I am glad to have got home, after making a truce for myself, and rid at last of all the bother of war with its fights and fighting captains.' Dating the commencement of the war B.C. 431, we thus fix the play at 425. There is rather more difficulty in the τρία καὶ δέκ' ἔτη assigned in Pac. 989, which places the outbreak of the war about three years earlier. Compare inf. 890.

270. The same play between μαχῶν and Λαμάχων occurs

inf. 1071. Similarly κάν Γέλα κάν Καταγέλα, 606.

272. ὀρικὴν, ὠρεῖαν. A. Müller cites ὠρικῶς, 'in maiden style,' from Plut. 963. The Schol. says the poet had used the word in the Δαιταλῆς.—ὑληφόρον, carrying a burden of brushwood on her head.—Θρᾷτταν, here used as a noun for δούλην, and so apparently, Theocr. II. 70, Εὐχαρίδα Θρᾷττα, τροφὸς ἀμακαρίτις, 'Eucharidas' Thracian maid, my nurse, since dead.' Pac. 1138, χάμα τῇς Θρᾷτταν λυνῶν.

273. Φελλέως. A spur of Mount Parnes, so called from φελλός, 'cork,' probably from its grove of quercus suber. Nub. 71, ὅταν μὲν οὖν τὰς αἶγας ἐκ τοῦ Φελλέως, sc. ἐλαύνῃς. The Schol., who says rocky places with a thin capping of earth were so called, apparently confounds this with ἀφελῇ πεδία, Equit. 527.—ἐκ, i.e. 'belonging to,' rather than κλέπτουσαν ἐκ Φ., the words being too far removed.

277. ἐκ κραιπάλης, after the debauch (head-ache). Ran. 218, κραιπαλόκωμος. Vesp. 1255, κά-πειτ' ἀποτίνειν ἀργύριον ἐκ κραιπάλης.—τρίβλιον εἰρήνης, 'a pot of peace,' said παρὰ προσδοκίαν for κυκεῶνα, 'a posset;' Cf. Pac. 712.—ῥοφήσει Meineke and others, after Elmsley, the middle being the more usual future.

279. φεψάλῳ, inf. 666, 'in the charcoal-sparks.' Hence ἐφεψαλάθη, Aesch. Prom. 370.

281. βάλλε, 'hit him again,' or 'keep throwing at him;'—οὐ βαλεῖς; 'pelt him, I say, pelt him!'—παῖε πᾶς Bergk, which is not improbable.

284. τὴν χύτραν, 'You'll smash the sacred crock,' viz. in which the ἔγνος was carried, 246. He appeals to superstition rather than to any sentiment of mercy. A. Müller thinks the χύτρα may have stood on the altar on the stage. But if the stones were thrown at the carrier of it, he would be more likely to protect himself by the excuse. Perhaps the verse should be read interrogatively. Schol. πάνν δὲ κινεῖ γέλωτα τῆς μὲν κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ ἀφροντιστῶν, τῆς δὲ χύτρας προνοούμενος, ἐν ᾗ τὸ ἔγνος ἦν.

285. σὲ μὲν οὖν. 'Nay, 'tis you we intend to stone, you good-for-nothing fellow!' Equit. 910, ἐμοῦ μὲν οὖν. Nub. 71 (cited sup. 273).

286. γεραίτατοι, 'most venerable.' Formed as if from a positive γέρης or γερεῦς. Compare ὀψιαίτατος, ἀσμεναίτατος.—The metre again passes into paeons and cretics.

292. ἴστε γ' is the common reading, and is quite unobjectionable. The γε gives a natural sense, 'Yes, but,' &c., a very common use of δέ γε, which occurs in three consecutive verses in Equit. 363—5. Elmsley reads οὐκ ἴστ' ἔτ', Dindorf οὐκ οἶδ' αὖτ', Hamaker (followed by the later editors) ἀκούσατ' ἀλλ' ἀκούσατε, 'hear, do hear!' Cf. 322. MS. Rav. has οὐκ ἴσατ', the letters of which are not very unlike ἀκούσατ', but the repetition of the imperative with ἀλλὰ is not in the poet's style, and ἴσατ' was probably a metrical correction of ἴστε, when the γε had dropped out.

295. σοῦ γε. 'What! hear you!' The deliberative conjunctive. — χάσομεν, we will bury you under a heap of stones, as if under a tumulus.

300. ὃν κατατεμῶ. 'Whom I will yet cut up into shoe-tops (top-leathers) for the Cavaliers.' The MSS. give ὃν ἐγὼ κατατεμῶ.

Meineke and Holden ὃν ἐγὼ τεμῶ. The pronoun is not wanted here, and it seems to have been inserted to make a paeon in place of a resolved cretic. Cleon's trade of a tanner or currier is obviously alluded to, and the threat here uttered clearly proves that the poet had already planned, if not in part composed, the Ἰππεῖς. See sup. 5. It is to be remarked however that the Chorus says this. It is therefore probable that the same Chorus was already being trained, and drilled for their parts in the coming comedy. See inf. 1149.

302. λόγους λέγοντος. So sup. 299, and Eur. Med. 321, ἀλλ' ἔξιθ' ὡς τάχιστα, μὴ λόγους λέγε.—ὅστις, cum feceris, &c. Cf. 225.—τιμωρήσομαι, 'I will have my revenge on him.'

307. πῶς δέ γ' ἂν, 'Well, and how,' &c. See on 292. Dindorf, Meineke, and Müller adopt Elmsley's needless alteration πῶς δ' ἔτ' ἂν κ.τ.λ.—καλῶς i.e. σε ἐσπείσθαι.—οὔτε βωμὸς, &c., the three solemn forms of oaths, by the altar, by verbal pledge, and by joined hands.—μένει, i.e. οἱ οὔτε βωμῷ ἐμμένουσιν, 'who abide by no oath.'

309. οἶδ' ἐγώ. 'I know well that even those Laconians, on whom we press so hardly, are not to be blamed for all our troubles;' i.e. that a certain party, the war-party, at Athens, are just as culpable. The poet blames them with equal severity in Pac. 635 seqq.—The Chorus, bigoted against the Spartans, will not listen with patience to the insinuation.

314. ἐκείνους, 'the other side,' 'the enemy.' I can prove, he says, that there are some points, and those not few, in which they are even being wronged by us at this very time.' He alludes, probably, to the same kind of provocations that are more fully described inf. 515 seqq.

bably from ἐπὶ and ξαίνειν, a block to cut or hack meat upon, cf. inf. 320.—The MSS. reading τὴν κεφαλὴν ἔχων is retained by Bergk, though an example seems wanting of a dactyl in this foot of a comic trochaic. Many alterations have been proposed; perhaps the worst, which A. Müller adopts as the best, is Hansing's τὴν γε κεφαλὴν σχῶν λέγειν, which is utterly unmetrical, and could not have been written by the poet. From 356 inf. Meineke reads πάνθ' ὅσ' ἂν λέγω λέγειν. But cf. Plut. 674, ὀλίγον ἄνωθεν τῆς κεφαλῆς τοῦ γραδίου, Eccl. 524, 1117, inf. 439, 585, 833, passages which show a fondness for τὴν κεφαλὴν in this part of a verse.

320. καταξαίνειν, probably a metaphor from beating or braying flax with stones. Eur. Phoen. 1145, πρὶν κατεξάνθαι βολαῖς. Soph. Aj. 728, τὸ μὴ οὐ πέτροισι πᾶς καταξανθεὶς θανείν.

—ἐς φοινκίδα, till he is as red all over as gall-dyed cloth, used by soldiers, Pac. 1173.

321. οἶον αὖ. An exclamation uttered aside, perhaps. 'How this black charred log (i.e. the old charcoal-burner) has flared up again against us!' A. Müller compares Thesm. 729, κἀγὼ σ' ἀποδείξω θυμάλωπα τήμερον, remarking that there is a play on θυμός. Hesych. explains the word by ξύλον κατακεκαυμένον, δαλόν.

332. ἀνθρώκων, said παρὰ προσδοκίαν for ἀνθρώπων, 'human life,' the 'hostage' being a charcoal-basket, λάρκος. A.
Müller regards this and the similar scene in Thesm. 692 seqq. as a parody on the Telephus of Euripides, in which the infant Orestes was taken as a hostage by Telephus, to compel the Greeks to bring him aid in healing a wound he had received from the spear of Achilles.

cated form of the root κραγ.

336. τὸν ἥλικα, 'this companion of your own age.' A.
Müller, Meineke, and Bergk give ἀπολεῖς ἄρ' ὁμήλικα, MSS.
ἄρα τὸν ἥλικα. Dindorf ἀπολεῖς ῥα τὸν ἥλικα. On the one hand the article seems required; on the other, ῥα is an epic rather than an Attic word. Elmsley's conjecture, ἀπολεῖς δὲ τὸν ἥλικα, is perhaps the best, one MS.
(Δ) having ἄρα θ' ἥλικα. But the metre, which seems dactylic, is somewhat strangely interposed. Fort. ἄρα δὴ τὸν δαιμόνιον αὐθ' ὅτῳ τῷ τρόπῳ σουστὶ φίλον, Müller ὅτι τῷ τρόπῳ σουστὶ φίλος, Meineke ὅτι τῷ

 τ. σ. φίλος. The MS. reading satisfies both sense and metre, and no change is necessary beyond Elmsley's slight correction νυνὶ for νῦν. Lit. 'Then now say (what you have to say), and even about the man of Lacedaemon himself, that from his way of acting he is a friend of yours.' As however φίλον has the authority of Aldus and some MSS., we might also translate, 'Say of him whatever is pleasing to your disposition,' i.e. your feelings towards him. For the τε see sup. 93.
 The particle is wanting in R.,
 but is necessary to the metre,
 unless we adopt Bergk's τὸ Δ.
 Schol. ἀντὶ τοῦ εἰπεῖ καὶ ὅτῳ τρόπῳ ὁ Δ. ἐστὶ σοι φίλος. ἢ οὕτως εἰπεῖ τί σου τῷ τρόπῳ φίλον ἐστὶ

341. ἐξεράσατε, 'turn out folds of your mantles.'—τὸ ξίφος. See Vesp. 521. Dicacopolis had taken in his hand a sword to be used against him when his head was on the block, 318.

343. ἐγκάθηνται. The indicative after ὅπως μὴ is remarkable, and not easy to defend by examples. In Plat. Phaed. p.
 77 B, ὅπως μὴ ἀποθνήσκοντος τοῦ ἀνθρώπου διασκεδάννυνται ἡ ψυχὴ, there is a doubt if we should not read διασκεδαννῦνται for -ύηται. Something similar is Soph.
 Ant. 685, ἐγὼ δ' ὅπως σὺ μὴ λέγεις
 ὀρθῶς τάδε, οὐτ' ἂν δυναίμην μὴτ' ἐπισταίμην λέγειν. A. Müller reads on his own conjecture ἐγκάθωνται. But the Schol. explains the vulgate by ἐγκεκρυμ-μένοι εἰσὶ.

347. In this scene Dicaeopolis, who has so far prevailed with the Chorus as to obtain leave to speak his mind freely about the enemy, makes preparation, by a visit to Euripides, to plead their cause in the guise of a beggar, partly ad movendam misericordiam, partly, as he pretends, that he may not be recognised by Cleon (441).

ibid. ἐμέλλετε. 'I thought you would all of you soon wave your — cries; and very near to death were the — charred sticks from Parnes!' For this use of μέλλειν cf. Vesp. 460, ἄρ' ἐμέλλομέν ποθ' ὑμᾶς ἀποσοβήσειν τῷ χρόνῳ. Ran. 269, ἐμελλον ἄρα παύσειν ποθ' ὑμᾶς τοῦ κόαξ. Hom. II. xxii. 356, ἦ σ' εὖ γιγνώσκων ποτίσσομαι, οὐδ' ἄρ' ἐμελλον πείσειν.—βοήν is used παρὰ προσδοκίαν for χέρας. This was a form of asking for quarter, to 'wave the hands' in token of submission. Thuc. iv. 38, οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες παρήκαν τὰς ἀσπίδας οἱ πλείστοι, καὶ τὰς χεῖρας ἀνέσεισαν. Act. Apost. xix. 33, ὁ δὲ Ἀλέξανδρος κατασεισας τὴν χεῖρα ἤθελεν ἀπολογεῖσθαι τῷ δήμῳ. The substitution of βοήν for χέρας is quite in the style of Aristophanes, as in the next line ἄνθρακες is perhaps for ἄνθρωποι (cf. 332). Not perceiving this, Dobree and Elmsley (followed by Meineke and Dr Holden, who also give πάντως), read ἀνήσειν τῆς βοῆς, and A. Müller ἀνήσειν τὴν βοήν.—Παρνήσιοι, not 'of Parnassus,' but 'of Parnes,' which was near the deme Acharnae. Dindorf reads Παρνήθιοι after Bentley. The MSS. give, as usual, Παρνάσιοι or Παρνάσσιοι, which the Schol. regards as an intentional joke on the heroi.—ὀλίγου δ' Meineke and Holden, ὀλίγον γ' Elmsley.

350. μαρίλη, the dust of charcoal, whence the name Μαριλάδης, inf. 609. The genitive depends on συχνήν, like πολλοὺς τῶν λίθων, πολλὴν τῆς γῆς, &c. Thuc. i. 5, τὸν πλείστον τοῦ βίου. In this idiom the accusative is in the same gender with the genitive, which regularly takes the article,—e.g. not πολλοὺς λίθων, but πολλοὺς τῶν λίθων. 'Through its fear (of being stabbed) the charcoal-scuttle befouled me with plenty of its smut.' He jocosely compares the black dust from the charcoal with the dirt of some living creature, and the ink of the cuttle-fish.—κατατιλᾶν occurs Av. 1054, 1117, Ran. 366, ἢ κατατιλᾷ τῶν Ἑκαταίων.

354. μηδὲν ἴσον, 'nothing fair,' is expanded for the joke's sake into a formula used in mixing wine with an equal part of water. Plut. 1132, εἴμοι δὲ κύλικος ἴσον ἴσῳ κεκραμένης. The most common proportion seems to have been τρία καὶ δύο (Equit. 1188).

355. ὑπὲρ ἐπιξήνου, sup. 318.

356. περὶ Λακ. Meineke, which is most unrhythmical.

357. φιλῶ γε. 'And yet, be sure, I am as fond of my own life as you can be (and therefore would not have made the risk if I were not confident that justice would prevail).'

359—62. These dochmiac verses express the excitement of the old men at the prospect of any good being said of the enemy.—ὅ τι φρονεῖς, 'as to what your views are.'

362. ἥπερ αὐτός. Adopt your own definition of justice, viz. that you should plead at your own risk, and go and bring the chopping-block here. (Exit Dicaeopolis to fetch it.)

367. τυννουτοσί. 'Such an insignificant little fellow as you see.' Schol. δεικνὺς τὸν δάκτυλον τὸν μικρὸν λέγει. "Summam modestiam simulat," says A. Müller. If it could be proved (as suggested in the Preface) that the part of Dicaeopolis was acted by Aristophanes, the adjective here might be thought to describe a real characteristic of stature, as φαλακρὸς does his baldness, in Pac. 771.

368. ἀμέλει, 'fear not; by Zeus! I am not going to en-shield myself,'—to dress as a ὀπλίτης for self-protection. He purposely uses a quaint word. See sup. 4.

370—5. τοὺς τε γὰρ—τῶν τ' αὖ. 'The country people are so conceited that any praise, however exaggerated, of the mother city delights them, and the old citizens are so crabbed and cross that one is pretty certain to be condemned by them in the law-courts if one says a word against Athens.'

372. εὐλογῇ. A neuter verb used, like εὔσεβειν τινα, with an accusative of the object. Eccl. 454, ἔτερά τε πλείστα τὰς γυναῖκας εὐλόγει. Aesch. Ag. 563, τοιαῦτα χρὴ κλύοντας εὐλογεῖν πόλιν καὶ τοὺς στρατηγούς. Equit. 565, εὐλογῆσαι βουλόμεσθα τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν. Such exaggerated praises of Athens are found throughout the speech of Pericles in Thuc. ii.

374. ἐν ταῦθα, 'herein,' viz. in their vanity and credulity, 'they get sold (deceived) by the orators without being aware of it.'

376. ψήφῳ δακεῖν. Compare τὸν αὐτοδᾶξ τρόπον, Pac. 607. The sense is, 'the people don't like to hear their city blamed, and so, if I am prosecuted, the dicasts will condemn me.' The dicasts always acted as a body of citizens, not merely as a judicial committee.

377. αὐτός. It is clear that, whoever personated the character of Dicaeopolis, he is now speaking in his own character. Of course, if the poet himself was acting the part, as some think that he did that of Cleon in the Equites, all would be clear and consistent.

378. τὴν πέρυσι, 'last year's comedy,' viz. the Babylonians, against which Cleon had laid an information on the ground that it had held up to ridicule the Athenian citizens in the presence of strangers,—perhaps because Cleon himself had been aimed at in the play. The process, as A. Müller seems rightly to think, would have been εἰσαγγελία, an impeachment to the Boule.

380. κατεγλώττιζε, 'he beslobbered me with his lies.' The noun occurs in Nub. 51, ἡ δ' αὖ μύρον, κρόκον, καταγλωττισμάτων. Cf. Equit. 351, τί δαὶ σὺ πίνων τὴν πόλιν πεποίηκας, ὥστε νυνὶ ὑπὸ σοῦ μονωτάτου κατεγλωττισμένην σιωπᾶν;

κύκκλωβόρει κᾶπλυνεν, ὥστ' ὀλίγου πάνυ

εἴτ' ἐξάνοιγε μηχανὰς τὰς Σισύφου, ὥς σκῆψιν ἀγὼν οὔτος οὐκ εἰσδέξεται.

381. κύκκλωβόρει. The Cycloborus was a mountain-torrent down Parnes, alluded to in Equit. 137. Pac. 757, Vesp. 1034, φωνὴν δ' εἶχεν χαράδρας ὄλεθρον τετοκνίας. Cleon had a loud spluttering voice, κεκραξιδάμας, Vesp. 596, to which allusion is often made by the poet.—ἐπλυνε, 'he abused me like a washerwoman.' Plut. 1061, πλυνόν με ποιῶν ἐν τοσούτοις ἀνδράσιν. Dem. p. 997 fin., ἀλλήλους δὲ πλυνοῦμεν, καὶ ὁ τῷ λόγῳ κρατήσας ἄρξει. There seems a joke on the antithetic words πλύνειν and μολύνειν, as if he had said 'he washed me till I had got quite dirty,' lit. 'by being mixed up with a dirty business.' Inf. 847, κού ξυντυχών σ' Ἄτρεββόλος δικῶν ἀναπλήσει.

384. This verse, which occurs again at 436, can hardly be right here, on account of the repetition of με, which here stands for ἐμαυτόν. Either there was aprosiopesis, and the speaker was cut short by the hurried question of the Chorus, or some other line was read, e.g. πτωχοῦ στολὴν λαβόντα περᾶσαι τύχην. Elmsley, having little confidence in his own conjecture ἐνσκευάσασθαι γ', inclosed the verse in brackets.

385. τριβάς, 'delays.' Soph. Oed. R. 1160, ἀνὴρ ὅδ' ὥς ἔοικεν, ἐς τριβάς ἔλθ. Antig. 577, μὴ τριβάς ἔτ', ἀλλὰ ἰὺν κομίζετ' εἴσω, δμῶες.

389. λαβὲ δέ. 'Nay, take, for all that I care, from Hieronymus a dark thick close-haired cap of invisibility.' The man here mentioned, and again alluded to in Nub. 548, as κομήτης παῖς Ξενοφάντου, was a poet, either of tragedy or dithyramb, ridiculed for his long hair (ὡς πάνυ κομῶν, Schol.) and perhaps for the use of such bombastic terms as the compound epithet. Plat. Resp. x. p. 612 B, ἐάν τ' ἔχη τὸν Γύγου δακτύλιον, ἐάν τε μή, καὶ πρὸς τοιοῦτῳ δακτυλίῳ τὴν Ἀἶδος κυνῆν. See Iliad v. 845. Hes. Scut. 227.

391. Σισύφου. He was the typical impostor of Tragedy; the κέρδιστος ἀνδρῶν, Il. vi. 153.—ἀλλ' ἐξάνοιγε, Dr Holden and Müller, after Meineke, from Suidas. A very inferior reading, as an imperative immediately precedes.

392. σκῆψιν, πρόφασιν, excuse or delay. The phrase was proverbial. A. Müller cites Plato, p. 421 D, οὐ μοι δοκεῖ προφάσεις ἀγὼν εἰσδέχσθαι. Hence Cobet's reading, adopted by Meineke, οὐχὶ δέξεται, is no improvement.

395. παῖ παῖ. He knocks at a side door on the stage, representing the house of Euripides. Aesch. Cho. 640, παῖ παῖ, θύρας ἄκουσον ἐρκείας κτύπον. According to the Schol., the door was opened by the actor Cephisophon. But this hardly suits δούλος, 401. Perhaps he took this view from ὑποκρίνεται ibid.

396. οὐκ ἔνδον ἔνδον. This is an imitation of the style of Euripides, θανὼν τε κού θανὼν, ἔστιν τε κούκ ἔτ' ἔστιν, οὐ θέλων τε καὶ θέλων, &c.

398. ἐπύλλια, 'versicles.' Pac. 532, ἐπυλλίων Εὐριπίδου.

399. ἀναβάδην. 'In superiore parte aedium,' A. Müller.

He is clearly right, and he might have added that in this consists the joke of the κρεμάθρα in Nub. 218, viz. the supposed proximity to the stars as favourable to the study of meteorics. So in Nub. 230, Socrates is made to say, οὐ γὰρ ἂν ποτε ἐξεῦρον ὀρθῶς τὰ μετέωρα πράγματα, εἰ μὴ κρεμάσας τὸ νόημα καὶ τὴν φροντίδα λεπτήν καταμίξας εἰς τὸν ὅμοιον αἶρα. Εἰ δ' ὦν χαμαὶ τάνω κάτωθεν ἐσκόπουν, οὐκ ἂν ποθ' εὔρον.—There is severe satire in the notion of a man composing Tragedy while his mind is far away.

401. ὅθ', i. e. ὅτε.—ὑποκρίνεται, 'acts so cleverly,' 'gives such clever answers.' In Vesp. 53, ὑποκρινόμενον ὀνείρατα is 'a dream-interpreter;' 'one who gives answers about dreams.' Il. v. 150, ὁ γέρων ἐκρίνατ' ὀνείρους.

405. ὑπάκουσον, 'do open the door!'

406. Χολλείδης. So Elmsley for Χολλίδης. Müller argues from sup. 34 that Dicaeopolis must really have belonged to the Acharnian deme, and this is only a joke on χολός. (So the Schol.) We have no proof, however, that charcoal was not cheap and abundant in both demi.—καλῶ σ' ὁ Χολλείδης, Meineke, Holden, Müller, following Cobet,—it is difficult to see why. 'Dicaeopolis calls you, of the Chollid deme; it is I.' It is not usual to add the article with the adjective denoting the deme.

407. 'The voice of Euripides is heard from within, replying that he is too busy. 'Then,' says his persecutor, 'show yourself in that upper room of yours.' The eccyclema is brought into play, to display the poet's studio with all his dresses and tragic paraphernalia around him.

410. τί λέλακας; 'What do you say?' A mock-tragic word for τί λέγεις; Hippol. 54, πολὺς δ' ἄμ' αὐτῷ προσπόλων ὀπισθόπους κῶμος λέλακεν.—ἀναβάδην, 'do you compose up there when you might do so down here?' 'Tis not for nothing that you represent the lame and the halt in your plays!' A hit at the play on Bellerophon, who fell from his Pegasus. See Pac. 147.—οὐκ ἐτὸς, haud frustra; an adverb connected with ἐτώσιος. Cf. Thesm. 921. Plut. 404.

412. τί ἔχεις, 'why have you got them with you there?' Müller and others understand τί φορεῖς; 'why are you wearing?' But the joke seems to be to make the studio appear like an old-clothes' shop, with sundry suits hanging on pegs, or labelled and arranged about the room.

413. πτωχοὺς. 'No wonder that you introduce beggars in your plays,' when you keep such a good stock of rags! Cf. Lysist. 138, οὐκ ἐτὸς ἀφ' ἡμῶν εἶσιν αἱ τραγωδαίαι. Thesm. 921, οὐκ ἐτὸς πάλαι ἡγυπτιάζει'.

415. του, i. e. τινός, 'some old play (that you have done with),' is a probable correction of Bergk's for τοῦ. Some twenty years later 'the old drama' might have borne an intelligible meaning, compared with the developments of style and metre in the poet's later plays. The Schol. understands by 'that old play' the Telephus.

416. μακράν. From v. 497 to v. 556. The Schol. takes the epithet as a satire on the long speeches in the plays of Euripides.—θάνατον, cf. 355—7.

418. ὁδὶ. He points to a very shabby suit in which he dressed up his Oeneus on the stage. The first verse of that play is cited in Ran. 1238.—ἡγωνίζετο, 'acted.'

423. λακίδας, 'tatters,' Aesch. Cho. 26. The tragic tone in which Euripides sustains the dialogue, and the long list of beggar-kings which he is made to produce in so short a space, are admirably conceived by the poet.

424. Φιλοκτήτου. This play was brought out with the Medea in 431—2 B. C. A full description of the poverty and distress of Philoctetes in the isle of Lemnos is given in Bk. ix of Quintus Smyrnaeus, doubtless from the Cyclic poets whom both Sophocles and Euripides so largely followed.

425. πτωχιστέρου. Formed like λαλίστατος, ποτίστατος, φενακίστατος, μονοφαγίστατος, Vesp. 923.

426. δυσπινῇ, 'squalid.' The dirt adhering to clothes was specially called πίνος. Soph. Oed. Col. 1258, ἐσθῆτι σὺν τοιαῖδε, τῆς ὁ δυσφιλῆς γέρων γέροντι συγκατέκεινεν πίνος. Eur. El. 304, πρῶτον μὲν οἷος ἐν πέπλοις αὐλίζομαι, πίνω θ' ὅσφ βέβριθα.

429. προσαιτεῖν and ἐπαιτεῖν are specially applied to beggars, who stand at or by people's doors. Cf. 452. St Luke xviii. 35, τυφλὸς τις ἐκάθητο παρὰ τὴν ὁδὸν προσαιτῶν (al. ἐπαιτῶν). Schol. οὐκ εἶπεν αὐτῶν, ἀλλὰ προσαιτῶν οὕτως γὰρ λέγεται. δεινὸς λέγειν, i.e. possessing a faculty very suitable to Dicaeopolis in his present strait. The addition of these two words suggests to Euripides the play that was meant. It was brought out with the Alcestis B. C. 439, and seems to have incurred much criticism and some ridicule. "In hac tragoedia," (says A. Müller) omnia quae in poesi Euripidis vituperantur, maxime ante oculos posita erant."

431. σπάργανα, 'wraps.'

433. ἄνωθεν. The order was, Ino, Telephus, Thyestes. For μεταξὺ τῶν Ἰνοῦς is, 'between them and Ino's.' Oed. Col. 290, τὰ δὲ μεταξὺ τοίτου μηδαμῶς γίγνου κακός, 'between now and the arrival of Theseus.' Ib.

583, τὰ δ' ἐν μέσῳ ἢ λῆστιν ἴσχεις ἢ δι' οὐδενὸς ποιεῖ.

435. διόπτα. 'That seest through and over all things!' (πατήρ ὁ παντόπτας, Aesch. Suppl. 130). This is said as an exclamation, when he holds the garment up to the light, and sees the holes in it. Plut. 715, ὅπας γὰρ εἶχεν οὐκ ὀλίγας, μὰ τὸν Δία. The following verse occurred before, 384. Here at least it is not inappropriate, if we suppose Dicaeopolis to put the dress on, and offer a prayer to Zeus that he may succeed in dressing himself up as a most wretched being.

438. τὰ ἀκόλουθα. 'Those other articles in keeping with these rags,' i.e. the outfit in which Telephus used to appear on the stage, and which are severally enumerated to v. 478.

440—1. This couplet, the Schol. tells us, is from the Telephus. The applied meaning is, that Aristophanes (as represented, it is difficult to see how, by Dicaeopolis), must seem to Cleon to be somebody else, to avoid a second prosecution. Hence he adds that he wishes the spectators to know who he really is, while he would make fools of the Chorus, i. e. delude them by his eloquent appeal, 'humbug them,' 'quiz,' 'poke fun at them.' For the Chorus, as his enemies, would side with Cleon against him. So they are stupidly to suppose he is Telephus pleading the cause of the Spartans. Perhaps we should read εἰδέναι μ' ὡς εἰμ' ἐγώ, 'to know that it is I.' The part he is going to act is that of Telephus.—For ὥσπερ Suidas gives ὅσπερ.

444. σκιμαλίζειν was a term used by keepers of poultry; see the note on Pac. 549.

445. This verse is either quoted from some play, or a parody on the style of Euripides.

446. εἰδαιμονοίης. 'But Telephus be—I won't say what!' lit. 'For Telephus, what I think of him.' The verse is parodied, as the Schol. again informs us, from the Telephus, καλῶς ἔχοιμι· Τηλέφῳ δ' ἀγὼ φρονῶ. For εἰδαιμονοίης, which occurs again 457, Dr Holden and Müller prefer a reading quoted by Athenaeus p. 186, εὖ σοι γένοιτο. Dicaeopolis adds, 'Bravo! how full I am getting of poetic phrases already.' He is Telephus already, and can make use of that hero's very words and sentiments. The mantle of a talker (429) has filled the wearer of it with talk.

450. The words ὦ θυμὲ to λιπαρῶν are supposed to be said aside.—γλίσχρος, 'greedy;' cf. ὦ γλίσχρων, Pac. 193.—λιπαρῶν, 'importunate,' 'persevering in entreaty.'

453. σπυρίδιον. 'A little wicker basket burnt through (or, with a hole burnt in it) by a lamp.' It seems that beggars used an inverted basket as a protection to hand-lamps on their stations. In some cases the flame would burn a hole

454. πλέκους, cf. Pac. 528, ἀπέπτυσ' ἐχέρον φητός ἐχέστων πλέκος. The Schol. says this is a parody on a line in the Telephus, τί δ' ὦ τάλας, σὺ τῷδε πείθεσθαι μέλλεις (l. θέλεις) ;

456. λυπηρὸς. 'I tell you, you are vexatious to me, so go away at once from the house.' Cf. inf. 460, 471, and Eur. Hel. 452, ὀχληρὸς ἴσθ' ὦν, καὶ τάχ' ὥσθήσει βίᾱ.

457. ὥσπερ, i.e. not at all, since the poet's mother was said (falsely, it would seem) to have been λαχανοπωλήτρια, Thesm. 387.

459. κοτυλίσκιον, 'a little cup with its brim (or upper edge) knocked off.' This, says A. Müller, was used by Telephus "ad aquam hauriendam." For the particular meaning of χεῖλος see the note on Aesch. Ag. 790, τῷ δ' ἐναντίῳ κύτει ἐλπίς προσήει χεῖλος (MSS. χειρὸς) οὐ πληρουμένῳ. The common reading, κυλίσκιον, which is contrary to analogy, was corrected by Brunck from Athen. p. 479.

460. φθείρου. 'Be off with you, now that you have got this. I tell you (again), you are such a plague to the house.' Euripides is getting vexed at the man's importunity. Bergk's correction ἴσθι δ' is certainly no improvement.

461. οὐπω κ.τ.λ. Said aside ; 'you are not yet aware what mischief you are doing of yourself,' i.e. your ready compliance is as much against you as my importunity is. Meineke quite spoils the sense by placing a colon at μὰ Δί' i.e. οὐπω ἄπειμι or ἀπέρχομαι, leaving the next clause without any intelligible meaning. Compare οὐκ οἶδα πω inf. 580.

463. σφογγίῳ, Dind. with most editors and MSS. σπογγίῳ Bergk with MS. Rav. The Latin form of the word is fungus. A bit of sponge, it would seem, was sometimes used to stop up a hole in a pot (Schol.).

Perhaps, however, as in Hom. Il. xviii. 414, a sponge used for wiping perspiration &c. was kept by the πτωχοί, or professional beggars, in some pot or small basin.

464. τὴν τραγωδίαν. Whether 'tragedy' in the abstract, or 'my tragedy,' viz. the Telephus, be meant, the joke is to make its essence consist in rags and cracked pottery. Schol. ὁλν τὰ σκεύη τῆς τραγωδίας.

466. οὐ μὴ τυχὼν, 'failing which,' quod nisi nactus ero.

469. σπυρίδιον, sup. 453. He now asks for some of the cast-away outside leaves of cabbages or other vegetables, such as beggars collected in their baskets for cooking and eating. The φυλλεῖα ἰσχνῶν ραφανίδων are expressly mentioned as serving this purpose, Plut. 544.

470. φροῦδα, 'all my plays are gone.' Cf. 464.

471. οὐκέτι. Supply from the context λιπαρήσω, or αἰτήσω σε. ἄγαν ὀχληρός, 'too troublesome,' viz. to be tolerated much longer. Eur. Med. 305, εἰμὶ δ' οὐκ ἄγαν σοφῇ. The καὶ in καὶ γὰρ serves to emphasize, 'for indeed I am,' &c. Cf. 460. Soph. Oed. R. 445, ὡς παρὰν σύ γ' ἐμποδῶν ὀχλεῖς. Prom. V. 1000, ὀχλεῖς μάτην με.—οὐ δοκῶν, "non reputans, invisum me fieri regibus," A. Müller. The verse is said to be a parody from either the Oeneus or the Telephus. The literal sense seems to be, 'thinking the lords do not dislike me,' i. e. as in fact they do. (He here moves away, but returns after a few paces.) The final request is a crushing one, and must have raised a storm of laughter against the unfortunate poet, whose mother was popularly believed to have been in the green-grocery line (Thesm. 387, Ran. 840).

474. ἐν ᾧπέρ, 'the very point on which,' &c.

475. The reading of the MSS. φιλτάτιον has been altered

κάκιςτ' ἀπολοίμην, εἴ τί σ' αἰτήσαιμ' ἔτι, by all the modern editors to φίλτατον. The adjective, used as a ὑποκόρισμα, is jocosely formed like ὑστάτιος, όσσάτιος. Compare Lysist. 872, ὦ γλυκύτατον Μυρρινίδιον, τί ταῦτα δρᾷς; ib. 889, ὦ γλυκύτατον σὺ τεκνίδιον κακοῦ πατρός.

478. σκάνδικα, 'chervil,' or some such plant. Cf. 457. Aesch. Cho. 760, ὃν ἐξέθρεψα μητρόθεν δεδεγμένος.

479. πηκτὰ δωμάτων, 'the doors of the house.' A tragic phrase, probably. The ecclyclama now closes in, and no more is seen of the poet.

481. ἄρ' οἴσθα. 'Are you not aware how great is the contest you will soon have to engage in, as you have undertaken to speak for the Lacedaemonians?' The friend of the Spartan was looked at with special distrust as the friend of oligarchy, if not a secret sympathiser with the Mede.

483. γραμμή. 'This is the starting-point in the race for your life.' A line was drawn on which several racers, δρομεῖς, set one foot as they stood abreast for the start, and to the same mark they returned, Eur. El. 955, 984.—καταπιὼν, 'now that you have swallowed Euripides.' The ancients had a curious notion that food imparted its own physical qualities to the mind or disposition of the eater of it; see sup. 166. Eq. 361, 491. Vesp. 1082. It is stated in a Review that "among some American tribes it was the custom to eat the flesh of heroes who fell in battle, in the hope of inheriting the valour of the departed." Here the 'bolting of Euripides' is a jocosely way of saying 'now that you have got in you his eloquence and clever sophistry.' Schol. ὥσπερ Εὐριπίδην ὅλον μετασχηματισάμενος καὶ ἀναλαβὼν ἐν σαντῶ.

485. ἐπήνεσα. As in Ran. 508, and elsewhere, the sense probably is, 'No, thank you!' In the dialogue between the man and his own soul, the speaker declines, but appeals to his heart or courage to act for him, as it were. Compare Od. xx. 18. Eur. Med. 1057, μὴ δῆτα, θυμέ, μὴ σύ γ' ἐργάσῃ τάδε· ἴασον αἰτοῦς, ὦ τάλαινα· φάσαι τέκνων.

486. ἐκεῖσε, to the goal, γραμμή being the starting-point. Hence ἄπελθε, 'go from this point to that,' begin your argument and prove it.

487. For εἰποῦς' we should perhaps read εἰπεῖν, 'for the purpose of saying just what you please.' Cf. 369. ἐκεῖ, viz. on the block. The participle could only mean, 'when you have said your say, then let them chop off your head if they choose;' and this gives a fair sense.

489. ἄγαμαι καρδίας. 'I admire myself for my heart.' So Eur. Rhes. 242, ἄγαμαι λήματος. Av. 1744, ἄγαμαι δὲ λόγων.

495. αὐτὸς αἰρεῖ. Cf. 318.

497. Dicaeopolis, being well primed in the Telephus, commences with a quotation (or parody, perhaps) from that play. 'Don't be jealous of me, ye spectators, if, though I am but a beggar, I still intend to speak in pr sence of Athenians about the city, as the composer of a comedy.' Here again Dicaeopolis must have been understood to mean, if not to be, Aristophanes; since the author only, not the actor, merely as actor, could be said ποιεῖν. So just below, he says 'For now at least Cleon will not bring frivolous charges against me.' There is a keen satire on the reluctance of the Athenians to listen to any one who was not a τις,—a demagogue or a man of note. Cf. 558. The ῥῆσις contains, like the similar one in Pac. 603, an important exposition of the misunderstandings and petty jealousies which gave rise to the war. Of course, such reasons have no historical weight. They represent the gossip of the day, and probably of the enemies of Pericles.

ξένων παρόντων τὴν πόλιν κακῶς λέγω.
 αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἐσμεν οὐπὶ Ληναίῳ τ' ἀγών, κοῦπω ξένοι πάρεισιν· οὔτε γὰρ φόροι 505
 ἤκουσιν οὔτ' ἐκ τῶν πόλεων οἱ ξύμμαχοι· ἀλλ' ἐσμέν αὐτοὶ νῦν γε περιεπτισμένοι·
 τοὺς γὰρ μετοίκους ἄχυρα τῶν ἀστών λέγω.
 ἐγὼ δὲ μισῶ μὲν Λακεδαιμονίους σφόδρα, καὐτοῖς ὁ Ποσειδῶν, οὐπὶ Ταιγάρῳ θεός, 510
 σείσας ἅπασιν ἐμβάλοι τὰς οἰκίας·
 κάμοι γὰρ ἐστὶν ἀμπέλια κεκομμένα.

504. αὐτοί, 'for we are by ourselves now, and only the meeting at the Lenaeum,'—the lesser festival of the Lenaea, which preceded the greater one of the Διονύσια τὰ ἐν ἄστει. At this latter the ξένοι were present, bringing to the Athenian treasury their tributes (φόροι). At the Lenaea only the ἀστοὶ and the μέτοικοι, who are now regarded as quasi-citizens, formed the audience. The two last are compared to grain lying in a heap mixed up with its own chaff; while the separation of the ξένοι is described by περιπίσσειν, the shelling out, or rubbing off the grain, such as barley or millet, from the ears and straw, which is then laid wholly aside. Thus περὶ has the proper meaning of stripping round the axis or stalk of the plant. Schol. κλον ξένων ἀπηλλαγμένοι καὶ καθαροὶ ἀστοί. κυρίως πίσσειν ἐστὶ τὸ κριθὰς ἢ ἄλλο τι λεπίζειν καὶ καθαροποιεῖν, ἐνθεν καὶ πτισάνη. The passage has been generally misunderstood, and περιεπτισμένοι wrongly taken to mean 'winnowed' or 'cleaned of the chaff.' (Hesych. περιεπτισμένην περιεξοσμένην, πε- ρικεκαθαρμένην.) Properly, the verb would seem to describe the removal of the glume adhering to the grain, as in the process of making groats or pearl-barley. Meineke, without the slightest probability, omits 508, the point of which, it is clear, he failed to perceive.

ibid. Ληναίῳ. In ancient times a public winepress, λήνη, appears to have stood in a low part of Athens called Λίμναι. Round it rustic plays would be acted during the vintage, which were thus called Ληναῖα, and the place itself Ληναῖον. Like the Equites (548) the 'Acharnians' was acted at the Lenaea, while the 'Babylonians,' for exhibiting which Cleon had prosecuted Aristophanes, had appeared at the Greater Dionysia.

509. μισῶ. He begins by avowing his hearty hatred of the Spartans, to clear himself of any charge of Laconism. He too, he says, as a farmer, has been injured by them, and he would like to see their city destroyed by the earthquake. Thucydides speaks of the frequent earthquakes during the war, I. 23, 128, III. 87, 89, &c.

ἀτάρ, φίλοι γὰρ οἱ παρόντες ἐν λόγῳ, τί ταῦτα τοὺς Λάκωνας αἰτιώμεθα;
 ἡμῶν γὰρ ἄνδρες, οὐχὶ τὴν πόλιν λέγω, 515
 μέμνησθε τοῦθ', ὅτι οὐχὶ τὴν πόλιν λέγω, ἀλλ' ἀνδράρια μοχθηρά, παρακεκομμένα, ἄτιμα καὶ παράσημα καὶ παράξενα, ἐσυκοφάντει Μεγαρέων τὰ χλανίσκια·

513. φίλοι, i.e. none but ἄστοι and μέτοικοι, who will give a fair hearing to one of their own body even if he lays on them some part of the blame.

514. τί ταῦτα. 'Why are we always blaming those Lacedaemonians for this?' i.e. why cannot we see that the affront was first given by ourselves?

515. ἡμῶν, 'men of our own body,'—individuals, not the city collectively. The last clause is jocosely added to evade Cleon's charge of τὴν πόλιν κακῶς λέγειν, sup. 503. Hence the emphatic repetition in the next verse.

517. ἀνδράρια μοχθηρά, some good-for-nothing fellows of no position in the state, viz. συκόφανται (or, as A. Müller thinks, certain demagogues). But cf. 820. The words following are partly borrowed from base or badly struck money. When the die was set awry, as we so often see in Greek and Roman coins, the piece was called παράτυπον (Schol.) or παρακεκομμένον, as opposed to ὀρθῶς κοπέν (Ran. 723). When the money-changer's mark was stamped on a coin as being below the standard value, and therefore κίβδηλον, it was called παράσημος, 'marked on one side,' or 'with a bad mark put on it.' See the note on Aesch. Agam. 780, δύναιμι οὐ σέβουσα πλοῦτον παράσημον αἰνέει. The earliest passage in which mention is made of striking coins with a die and a hammer is Aesch. Suppl. 278, Κύπριος χαρακτήρ τ' ἐν γυναικείοις τύποις εἰκὼς πεπληκται τεκτόνων πύξ ἀρσένων.—ἄτιμα, outlawed or disfranchised, and therefore having no legal right to interfere at all.—παράξενα, those who have got themselves placed on the register of citizens though liable to be indicted for ξενία, like the demagogue in Eur. Orest. 904, Ἀργείος οὐκ Ἀργείος ἡναγκασμένος. It does not appear however that demagogues are here specially pointed at, though some of these, as Elmsley shows, were charged with foreign extraction; cf. inf. 704.

519. τὰ χλανίσκια. The Megarians imported into the Attic market little cloaks or mantles (of the type of the Spartan χλαῖνα) for the use of slaves. Cf. Pac. 1002, δούλοισι χλανισκιδίων μικρῶν. Perhaps they had no rights of ἐπιμίξις with Athens; or they had not paid the market-toll, and therefore an information was laid against them; and this, with other vexations and consequent reprisals, is here said to have led to the famous Μεγαρικὸν ψήφισ-

κεῖ' που σίκνον ἴδοιεν ἢ λαγώδιον 520

μα of Pericles, by which these Doric allies of Sparta were formally excluded altogether from the Attic territory. Thucydides however (I 139) says it was due to their affording refuge to runaway Athenian slaves, and the occupation of sacred and neutral lands. Müller (Praef. p. xvi.) supposes that the Megarians had been excluded from the Attic market in consequence of their revolt from Athens after the battle of Coronea, B.C. 445, referring to Thuc. I. 67, ἄλλοι τε παριόντες ἐγκλήματα ἐποιοῦντο ὡς ἕκαστοι, καὶ Μεγαρῆς, δηλοῦντες μὲν καὶ ἕτερα οὐκ ὀλίγα διάφορα, μάλιστα δὲ λιμένων τε εἵργεσθαι τῶν ἐν τῇ Ἀθηναίων ἀρχῇ καὶ τῆς Ἀττικῆς ἀγορᾶς παρὰ τὰς σπονδάς. See Grote, Vol. v. p. 341.

520. σίκνον, a gourd, or water-melon. The articles here enumerated as supplied by Megara are intended to show the poverty and non-productiveness of the district. See Pac. 1001, where σκόροδα and σίκνοι are ironically described as μεγάλα ἀγαθά. See also Pac. 502.—χοιρίδιον, cf. inf. 818, where the Megarian pig-jobber is set upon by an informer.—χόνδρους ἄλας, 'bay-salt,' sold in crystals or lumps, not ground or beaten fine. In Vesp. 738, χόνδρον λείχειν seems to represent our 'barley-sugar,' being some kind of flavoured salt to suck (inf. 772). A variant χόνδρους ἁλὸς derives some support from Hesych. χόνδροι ἁλῶν· παχεῖς ἅλας. The singular is used inf. 835, παῖεν ἐφ' ἁλὶ τὴν μάδδαν. There were salt-works at Megara, inf. 760.

522. ταῦτ' ἦν Μεγαρικά. To whomsoever they belonged, it was assumed they were the produce of Megara, and (for some reason not stated) they were forthwith confiscated and sold (ἐπέπρατο). Cf. ἀπέδοτο φήνας, inf. 542.

523. ἐπιχώρια, 'common to the country.' Inf. 599 he satirizes informers as an Athenian 'institution.' He goes on to describe another affront given to the Megarians in a frolic of some young men who were out on a κῶμος or 'lark.'

524. Σιμαίθα. A Doric name, occurring Theocr. II. 101, εἴφ' ὅτι Σιμαίθα τυ καλεῖ, καὶ ὑφάγεο τᾷδε. Schol. ταύτης δὲ καὶ Ἀλκιβιάδης ἠράσθη, ὃς καὶ δοκεῖ ἀναπεπικέναι τινὰς ἡρπακέναι τὴν πόρνην.—For the κότταβος see Pac. 1244, and the note.

526. φύσιγξ or φύσιγγη was the outer skin of a leek, τὸ ἐκτὸς λέπισμα τῶν σκορόδων. Schol. It seems when rubbed on the skin to have caused blisters or irritation. The word is used with special reference to the onion being the produce of the country. Cf. sup. 166.

527. Ἀσπασίας. In requital for Simaetha the Megarians stole two girls belonging to Aspasia, Pericles' mistress: whereat he was so indignant that he caused the Μεγαρικὸν ψήφισμα to pass. A. Müller shows, from Plutarch and Athenaeus, that Aspasia had about her a number of girls of loose character. The effect of this decree in exasperating the Doric allies was so great, that the poet declares (seriously or not) that "three harlots caused the outbreak of the war." The direct cause of the decree (see Preface) was the murder of the herald Anthemocritus, who had been sent by the Athenians to Megaris to adjust mutual differences.

530. ἐντεῦθεν. 'From this it was that Pericles, like the god of heaven, thundered and lightened and threw all Hellas into a broil, and proposed laws written in the language of drinking songs, that the Megarians

Neither on land
Nor in market shall stand, Nor sail on the sea nor set foot on the strand.'

In the Pax 606, the passing of this obnoxious measure is attributed to Pericles under the fear of being implicated with some fraudulent transactions of Phidias the sculptor. Compare Diodor. Sic. xii. 40. Plat. Gorg. p. 516. The language of the decree is jocosely compared to a ditty attributed to Timocreon of Rhodes, ὡφέλης γ', ὦ τυφλὲ Πλοῦτε, μήτε γῇ μήτ' ἐν θαλάσῃ μήτ' ἐν ἡπείρῳ φανῆναι. For ἡπείρῳ Meineke chooses to read οὐρανῷ, from Schneidewin, comparing Vesp. 22, which has nothing to do with this passage. It is more likely that οὐρανῷ, not ἡπείρῳ, was the word in the drinking-song, and that the poet changed it on purpose to ἡπείρῳ. The words of the decree were ὅς ἂν ἐπιβῇ τῆς Ἀττικῆς Μεγαρέων, θανάτῳ ζημιουσθαι, Plut. Pericl. c. 30.

535. βάδην, ἀντὶ τοῦ κατὰ βραχὺ ἀύξανόμενον τοῦ λιμοῦ καὶ ἐπίδοσιν λαμβάνοντος, Schol.

537. μεταστραφείη, might be rescinded, or altered. See Thuc. I. 67, 139, 140, 145.

538. δεομένων, 'though they (the Lacedæmonians) often requested it.'

540. ἔρεῖ τις, οὐ χρῆν. From the Telephus, as the Schol. tells us. 'No doubt, people will say, it was their fault: they ought not to have gone to war for such trifles. But tell us what they ought to have done under the circumstances. Suppose that, instead of Athenians laying information against the goods of a Spartan ally, the converse had occurred,—suppose that some Spartan had gone to an obscure island belonging to Athens, and there confiscated some trifling article. Would you Athenians have been quiet under the insult? I trow not.'

542. φήνας, i.e. by the process against contraband goods called φάσις. Cf. 827, 912. A. Müller alters the word to κλέψας on his own authority, referring to the stealing of the girls sup. 524—7. Dr Holden also thinks φήνας corrupt, but gives no reason. The Schol. rightly explains it by συκοφαντήσας.

Müller asks, where the supposed information could have been laid, for, he says, it could not have been at Seriphus. It is clear the poet takes a hypothetical, and perhaps a practically impossible case: the informer at Seriphus is the counterpart to the informer at Athens. The comparison does not exactly hold, unless the information was laid against a Seriphian in the Spartan market, by a Spartan informer. But, as the Schol. says, a trifling and nominal wrong to Athens is described.

543. Again a quotation from the Telephus.

545. τριακοσίας. This was the number of the Athenian fleet at the beginning of the war, Thuc. II. 13.

546. τριηράρχου. The word seems here used for the captain (or paymaster) of a trireme, rather than in the technical sense which prevailed later, of the person who performed a public λειτουργία.

547. Παλλαδίων. Little figures or statuettes of the saving goddess were placed in or on the prow, perhaps like the modern figure-heads. Aesch. Theb. 195, στοᾷς στεναχούσης, σιτίων μετρουμένων, ἀσκῶν, τροπωτήρων, κάδους ὠνουμένων,

 στεφάνων, τριχίδων, αὐλη-ρίδων, ὑπωπίων, τι; 'Surely a sailor does not find safety in a storm by leaving the helm, and offering his prayers to the image at the prow, because his ship is in distress.' (A. Müller, quoting Becker's Charicles, says these figures were in the stern, and not in the prow. But the Schol.

 here agrees with the passage in Aeschylus, Παλλάδια ἐν ταῖς πρῶραις τῶν τριήρων ἦν ἀγάλματά τινα ξύλινα τῆς Ἀθηνᾶς καθιδρυμένα, though Eur. Iph. A. 240 seems to make the other way.)

548. στοᾷς. A piazza or open market in the Piraeus where barley-meal and flour were sold. See Dem. p. 917, and Eccl. 686, where it is called στοὰ ἀλφειόπωλις.

549. τροπωτήρες, the thong or loop by which the oar was hung on the σκαλμός, or rowlock, Aesch. Pers. 375, ναυβάτης τ' ἀνὴρ ἐτροπούτο κώπην σκαλῶν ἀμφ' εὐήρετον. See Arnold, Thuc. Append. to Vol. I. inf.
 554.

ibid. κάδοι, the Roman cadi, were not 'casks,' but jars of terra-cotta. There seems no reason to alter words which simply mean 'persons buying jars,' or 'buyers of jars.' Bergk proposed κάδων.

551. ὑπωπίων, 'bruised faces.'
 As inf. 873, the poet purposely mixes the most incongruous things.

552. κωπέων. The κωπεὺς was a spar roughly sawn and before the blade, πλάτη, was shaped out.—τύλα were wooden pegs, γόμφοι.—θαλαμιῶν, the oars of the lowest bench, the θαλαμῖται. Fac. 1232, τῇδ', διείς τὴν χεῖρα διὰ τῆς θαλαμῖας. The fastening or adjusting these on the row-locks was τροπούσθαι (sup. 549).

554. νιγλάρων, 'shakes,' 'quavers,' τερετίσματα, περιέργα κρούσματα, Hesych. and Pho-tius. The latter adds, on νιγλαρεύων, a clause not in Hesychius, καὶ ὁ νίγλαρος, κρουματικῆς language of flute-players'), Εὐπολὺς Δήμοις· τοιαῦτα μὲν τοι κρούματα.

555. ταῦτα κ.τ.λ. 'That is think Telephus (i. e. the Spartan) would not do the same?'

 The clause is a quotation from the play of Euripides.—νοὺς ἄρ' would not) we have no sense in us.' Meineke reads ὑμῖν.

557. The Chorus, half of whom are convinced while the other half retain their prejudices, now divide into ἡμιχόρια, and take opposite sides in the action, till the παράβασις v. 626, when all accept the views of Dicaeopolis about the war.

558. σὺ τολμᾷς. 'Do you, a beggar, presume to say this of us, men of age and repute?' See on 498.—εἴ τις ἦν, 'if we had a sycophant or two, do you reproach us with it?' (523).

562. τοῦτον, 'was it for him to say it?' A good satire on the common weakness of considering less what is said than who says it.

563. ἀλλ' οὔτι Bentley, whom most of the editors follow. No change is necessary; cf. Aesch. Theb. 1035, τοῦτον δὲ σάρκας οὐδὲ κοιλογαστορες λύκοι σπάσσονται. Pac. 195, ἰὴ ἰὴ, ὅτ' οὐδὲ μέλλεις ἐγγὺς εἶναι τῶν θεῶν. Thuc. I. 35, λύσετε δ' οὐδὲ τὰς Λακ. σπονδὰς.

564. ποῖ θεῖς; the unconvinced half are running off to catch hold of the obnoxious speaker, but are stopped by the rest, seized, and threatened with summary punishment. — ἀρθήσεται, 'you shall be hoisted,' a metaphor from wrestling; compare ἄρδην ἀπολλύναι, &c. Q. Smyrnaeus, IV. 226, δ δ' ἄρ' ἰδρείη τε καὶ ἀλκή πλευρὸν ὑποκλίνας Τελαμώνιον ὀβριμον νῖα ἐσσυμένως ἀνείρειν ὑπὸ μυνῶνος ἐρείσας ὤμον. Π. XXIII. 724, ἥ μ' ἀνείρ' ἦ ἐγὼ σε.—θενεῖς, the future of θείναι, which occurs Prom. V. 56, and elsewhere. Between θενῶν and θένων it is sometimes hard to decide; and there is a variant θένεις in this passage. See Elmsley on Heracl. 272. Schol. ἀντὶ τοῦ τύψεως.

566. Lamachus, the hero of the war-party, supposed to be present in the theatre, is invoked to aid the assailants of Dicaeopolis. A figure with a tremendous crest, armed at all points as an ὀπλίτης, bounces on the stage in pantomimic guise. He is first (567) appealed to as a chivalrous champion, then (568) as a friend and tribesman. A. Muller however notices that the Acharnian deme (see on 406) belonged to the Oeneid, Lamachus to the Acamantid tribe,

571. ἀνύσας, i. e. ἀνύσας τι,
 'quickly.' The MSS. give εἴτ' ἔστι τις or εἴτε τις ἔστι. The repetition of τις is remarkable, though not without parallel.
 A. Müller refers to Orest. 1218.
 But this passage has perhaps been tampered with by grammarians who endeavoured to make a trimeter verse, and Elmsley may be right in restoring a dochmiac verse, εἴτε τις ἔστι ταξίαρχος τις ἢ κ.τ.λ., which is Meineke's reading.—ἔχομαι μέσος, 'I am held fast by the waist.' Eur. Or. 265, μέσον μ'

 Cf. 565.

572. βοῆς, 'cry to the rescue,'
 'a call for aid.'—Nub. 28, πόσους δρόμους ἐλὰ τὰ πολεμιστήρια;

574. τίς κ.τ.λ., i. e. Who has invoked my aid?—σάγματος, the shield was carried, to preserve the painted devices upon it.

575. τῶν λόχων. A military λόχος (if the reading be right) is seen on the stage, like the 'Οδομάντων στρατὸς sup. 156.
 Cf. 65 and 862. Meineke omits this verse, and also 578. There seems however a good point in each of the rival parties appealing to Lamachus, one of them in ridicule of his dress. For λόχων R. gives φίλων, whence Thiersch ingeniously proposed πτίλων. Compare however inf.

576. οὐ γὰρ κ.τ.λ. The sense is, οὗτος τὴν Γοργόνα ἐξήγειρεν· οὐ γὰρ κακορροθεῖ τὴν πόλιν; to this, viz. κακορροθεῖς, λέγειν τάδε refers.

578. πτωχός. See 498. The moral is that the poor and weak are brow-beaten and silenced
 by the war-party in power.
 Hence the satire in the next

Lamachus accordingly hands him a feather out of it, τουτὶ again when he sees it used to tickle Dicaeopolis' throat.

588. πτίλον γάρ ἐστιν; 'Why, do you call this a feather?
Tell me, of what bird! Of a quiffin?' This, the old reading, by which some pantomimic kind of feather was handed to the countryman, is surely better than to give πτίλον γάρ ἐστιν to Lamachus, with a mark of apo-siopesis. The name of the bird, of course, satirizes the conceit
and the bravado of the wearer.

591. κατ' ἰσχύν, 'according to your strength,' i.e. such a little man as I (τυνονουτοσί, 367) am not worthy of your prowess. The γὰρ is not in the best copies: others have proposed σοῦ or σήν. Perhaps, ἀλλ' οὐ κατ' ἰσχύν ἐστιν. A. Müller wrongly explains non enim vi res haec agitur, comparing ὡς οὐ κατ' ἰσχύν—χρεῖη in Aesch. Prom. V. 212.

592. εὖοπλος. Müller understands this of a phallic appendage, such as that in Nub. 538, quoting Hesych. ὄπλον· ἐνδύμα πολεμικόν· καὶ τὸ αἰδοῖον. See sup. 158.—For ἀπεψώλησας (Plut. 295) Bergk rather ingeniously proposed ἀπεψίλωσας, 'stripped me,' viz. of my rags. Aesch. Cho. 682, φίλων ἀποψιλοῖς με τὴν παναθλίαν. See also Thesm. 538.

593. ταυτὶ κ.τ.λ. 'Is this what you, a beggar, say of your general?' (Or, 'of one who is a general.' Soph. Ant. 1053, οὐ βούλομαι τὸν μάντιν ἀντειπεῖν κακῶς.)

595—8. Under the form of a patronymic the countryman calls himself no place-hunter nor holder of office for pay, but a plain soldier, who has been on the military κατάλογος ever since the war broke out. Schol. Αἰολέων δὲ ἴδιον τὰ ἐπίθετα πατρωνυμικῶ τύπῳ φράζειν. Lamachus says he was elected to the office by show of hands in the assembly; to which Dicaeopolis objects that he was elected by 'three cuckoos,' which is explained to mean, two or three simpletons or empty talkers who persuaded the people to so foolish a course. Three seems to have no special meaning; compare βαῖα, τέτταρα sup. 2. It appears from the Schol. on 356 that in the 'Babylonians' the poet had satirized among other things τάς τε κληρωτάς· καὶ χειροτονητάς ἀρχάς. We may infer, therefore, that the same attack is here indirectly repeated. Compare Av. 1570, ὦ δημοκρατία, ποῖ πρεβίβας ἡμᾶς ποτε, εἰ τουτονὶ γ' ἐχειροτόνησαν οἱ θεοί.

Thracians for three drachmas per diem,' &c. Young men of the wealthier class had escaped service by getting themselves appointed as envoys, where instead of fighting for two drachmas a day they enjoyed an exemption from fighting with three drachmas. Cf. sup. 66, 159. The same embassy to the Thracians is alluded to as before, 134.—μισθοφοροῦντας is put παρὰ προσδοκίαν for πρεσβευομένους. — The names following doubtless contain some concealed satire on certain leading citizens. In Χάρης and Χαόνες there is an allusion to χάρις and χανός. Cf. 104, 613, 635. Equit. 78.

601. οἷος σὺ the MSS., Müller, οἷος σὺ Bergk, Meineke, οἷος σέ Holden. In several passages of the like kind (see Mr Green's note) οἷος is by attraction for τοιούτους οἷος or οἷοι, &c.

606. τοὺς δὲ κ.τ.λ. Laches seems to be meant, who is called Λάβης in Vespr. 900, and who made a visit, not altogether a friendly one, to Sicily, Thuc. III. 86 seqq.—Καταγέλα, compare the pun on μαχῶν and Λαμάχων, sup. 270. Probably Κατάνη is really meant.—Lamachus has the same reply to this as to the former question:—‘they were elected by the people.’

608. ἔμᾱς, Lamachus and the favoured party; τωνδὶ, the chorus of Acharnians, one of whom is jocosely termed ‘Son of Smut,’ or ‘Son of a Dustman,’ from μαρίλη, sup. 350.—ἀμηγέπη, ‘by some means or other;’ compare ἀμόθεν γε, Od. I. 10.—έτέόν, ‘tell me truly, now,—have you ever yet been an ambassador?’

610. ἐνί, if that reading is right, which is extremely doubtful, is supposed to represent ἦν or ἦνι, en! Equit. 26, ἦν, οὐχ ἡδύ; Pac. 327, ἦν ἰδοῦ, καὶ δὴ πέπαυμαι. No reliance can be placed on any of the conjectural readings, ἐνῃ, ἐνῃ, ἐνῃ. The word is written ἐνῃ without accent or breathing in MS. Rav. Schol. οὕτως ἐν τοῖς ἀκριβεστάτοις, ἐνή, ἵνα λέγῃ ἐκ πολλοῦ. The reading in the text is that of Meineke and Bergk. Müller and Holden read πολὺς ὤν; ἐνή; the latter, however, gives ἐνή· ἀνένευσε, the sense of which is not clear.—ἀνένευσε, see 115 sup.—καίτοι γε, a rare combination, for which Elmsley would read καίτουστί γε. 'And yet he is sober and industrious.'

612. Ἀνθράκυλλος is Reiske's ingenious correction. The names are clearly borrowed from the charcoal-trade. Cf. 214. For κεῖφορίδης Meineke and Holden give ἢ Εὐφ., with Elmsley.

613. τὰ Ἐκβάτανα. 'That Ecbatana,' viz. to which so many envoys are sent, sup. 64, Thuc. II. 7.—Χαόνας, 604.

614. ὁ Κοισύρας. 'No! 'tis that descendant from Coesyra.' The Schol. refers this to one Megacles; but we can hardly doubt that Alcibiades is meant, since in Nub. 48 Pheidippides, whose character so exactly represents him, is pointedly associated with Megacles and his niece Coesyra (46—8). But if so, it is interesting to find that this young spendthrift was in debt and difficulties even in 425. Ten years later, we know from Thuc. VI. 15 that by his extravagance in horse-racing and other expenses he had exceeded his means. He is mentioned inf. 716 as ὁ Κλεινίου.

615. ὑπ' ἐράνου, 'through (unpaid) club-money.' The members of these private εἰσιμαίαι were called πληρωταί, each of them paying a quota (Dem. Mid. p. 574, Aesch. Theb. 477 Dind.). Schol. ἕθος εἶχον ἀποτελεσματί τι εἰς τὸ κοινὸν διδόναι, ὅπερ οἱ μὴ διδόντες καὶ ἄτιμοι ἐνομιζόντο καὶ μετὰ βίας ἀπηγοῦντο. There seems no need to limit the word here, with A. Müller, to money advanced by friends, and to be repaid as a loan. In its origin the word probably meant 'a token of regard;' compare ἐραννός, and the institution was one of friendship and charity. Dem. Aphob. p. 821 § 25, ὁ ὑποθεῖς τῷ πατρὶ τὰνδράποδα πονηρότατος ἀνθρώπων ἐστὶ καὶ ἐράνους τε λέλοιπε πλείστους καὶ ὑπέρχρεως γέγονε.

616. ὥσπερ κ.τ.λ. Like persons who are accustomed in the evening to empty slops into the street, patulas defundere pelles, Juv. III. 277, and who call out to those below, 'Stand aside!' so all his friends advised him to get out of the way for a while. Schol. παίζει πρὸς τὸ ἐξίστω ὄνομα, δμᾶννυμον δν τῷ ἐκχώρησον.—ὥσπερ ἐκχέοντες is literally, 'as if they had been pouring out dirty water.'

618. Lamachus, representing the 'high party,' resents the impertinent freedom of 'these low fellows.' A. Müller well compares Av. 1570, ὦ δημοκρατία, ποῖ προβιβᾷς ἡμᾶς ποτέ; Cleon's remark in Thuc. iii. 37, that 'he has come to the conclusion that democracy is unable to rule,' is intended by the historian to represent him as φρονεῖν τυραννικά. The reply is, 'Oh dear, no! Of course not, unless — Lamachus still gets his pay!' Any democratic theories which curtailed that would be intolerable indeed. Müller thinks there is satire on the avarice of Lamachus; but probably he only represents the anti-peace party.

624. By pointedly connecting the Boeotians with the Megarians, not only here but inf. 860 and Pac. 1003, it may fairly be inferred that both parties alike had been excluded from the Athenian market.

625. ἀγοράζειν, 'to frequent the market.' Schol. τὸ ἀγοράζειν οὐκ ἴσον τέθεικε τοῦ ἀνείσθαι, ὡς ἡμεῖς, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ τοῦ ἐν ἀγορᾷ διατρίβειν' λείπει δὲ τὸ ἰόντας. So Equit. 1373, οὐδ' ἀγοράσει γ' ἀγένης οὐδ' ἐν τὰγορᾷ. Inf. 720—2, ἀγοράζειν ἐφ' ᾧ τε πωλεῖν. Lysist. 633, ἀγοράσω τ' ἐν τοῖς ὕπλοις ἐξ ὧς Ἀριστογόνοισι.

ibid. Λαμάχῳ δὲ μή, sc. πωλεῖν, 'but not to sell to Lamachus.' There is little sense in saying 'to Lamachus I make a proclamation not to sell to me.' The more correct syntax would be πρὸς δὲ Λάμαχον μή. Mr Hailstone well compares Theoc. v. 136, οὐ θεμιτὸν, Λάκων, ποτ' ἀηδόνα κίσσας ἐρίσδεν, οὐδ' ἐποπας κίκνοισι, and Xen. Oecon. i. 12, εἰ δὲ πωλοῖη αὐτὸς πρὸς τοῦτον δὲ μὴ ἐπίσταται χρῆσθαι with Hiero i. 13, καὶ ταῦτα τοιαῦτα δύντα οὕτω τίμια πωλεῖται τοῖς τυράννοις. Lamachus tries to get the benefit of the market inf. 960, but fails. Compare also 722. The general sense is, 'then, if you prefer war, I prefer the blessings of peace, from which you shall be excluded.'—This concludes the scene, and the two disputants leave the stage.

626—718. The Parabasis, or address of the Chorus to the spectators, for the first part (to 658) in the name and in behalf of the poet, for the second part (676 to the end) in setting forth their own grievances as citizens. The whole of the Chorus have now resolved to side with the peace-party, and henceforth make common cause with Di-caeopolis.

627. ἀποδύντες. 'Let us throw off our dresses and commence the anapaests.' Schol. ἀποδύνονται τὴν ἔξωθεν στολὴν ἵνα εὐτόνως χορεύωσι καὶ εὐστροφώτεροι ᾧσι πρὸς τὰ παλαισμάτα. To this custom, perhaps, v. 729 of the Pax refers, ἡμεῖς δὲ τέως τὰδε τὰ σκεύη παραδόντες τοῖς ἀκολούθοις δῶμεν σώζειν. For the dative cf. Lysist. 615, ἀλλ' ἐπαποδυνάμεθ', ἄνδρες, τουτῷ τῷ πράγματι.

628. ὁ διδάσκαλος. Whether Aristophanes himself or Callistratus is meant, the same person is evidently spoken of as the author of this and the two preceding comedies (the 'Banqueters' and the 'Babylonians'). The words are capable of two senses; (1) our poet has never yet composed a parabasis; (2) he has never yet composed one for the purpose of praising himself. The Schol. appears to take it in the former sense, ἀντὶ τοῦ ἐν τῇ παραβάσει οὐπω εἶπε, unless he means that the poet himself has not been the subject of the former παραβάσεις. The latter is more probably the meaning, and the allusion is to the practice of the rival dramatists, notably Eupolis, against whom Pac. 735 is directed; χρῆν μὲν τύπτειν τοὺς ῥαβδούχους, εἴ τις κωμῳδοποιητὴς αὐτὸν ἐπῆνει πρὸς τὸ θέατρον παραβάς ἐν τοῖς ἀναπαίστοις. See also Equit. 507 (where ἡμᾶς is emphatic). This, the Chorus says, the poet had never done till now, when it has become necessary to justify himself against Cleon's attack or impeachment by εἰσαγγελία (sup. 379).

632. μεταβούλους. Cf. Eccl. 797, ἐγὼ δὲ τοὺτους χειροτονοῦντας μὲν ταχὺ, ἅττ' ἂν δὲ δόξη, ταῦτα πάλιν ἀρνούμενους. It is likely, as Müller suggests, that the reversal of the decision about the Mitylenians in the popular assembly in the year preceding is alluded to (Thuc. III. 50). The meaning then is, 'As the Athenians have shown they can so soon alter their minds, the poet hopes they will now take his part against Cleon.' Cf. Soph. Oed. R. 617, φρονεῖν γὰρ οἱ ταχεῖς οὐκ ἀσφαλεῖς.

633. πολλῶν ἀγαθῶν, i.e. not πολλῶν κακῶν, as his enemies say. So Socrates playfully rated his deserts at σίτησις ἐν πρυτανείῳ instead of the penalty of death, Apol. p. 37 A. For ἄξιος Meineke needlessly reads αἷτιος with Bentley. See sup. 8.—παύσας κ.τ.λ., 'for having stopped you Athenians from being so excessively pleased at what strangers said in your praise.' Schol. ξενικοῖς, τοῖς ἀπὸ τῶν ξένων πρεσβέων λεγομένοις. It has been thought that the embassy of the Leontines to Athens (Thuc. III. 86) is alluded to, and the favourable impression made by the orator on the occasion, Gorgias, Plat. Hipp. maj. p. 282 B, Diodor. Sic. XII. 53 (Müller). See also Thucyd. I. 84.

635. χαννοπολίτας, vain, conceited, citizens. See on 599.

637—9. The epithets taken from old lyric or dithyrambic songs in praise of Athens,—whatever be their exact sense,—so pleased the Athenians, that whenever they heard the words they could hardly sit still on their hinder parts, but were ready to stand up from their seats. Schol. εἰώθασιν οἱ ἐπαίων ἐλς ἑαυτοὺς γινομένων ἀκούοντες τὴν πυγὴν τῆς καθέδρας ἐξαίρειν. The word commonly rendered 'violet-crowned' may refer to Ἴωνες and the 'people of the purple dawn'; while λιπαράι, 'rich' or 'fertile,' probably described the rich creamy colour of the marble buildings, in appearance like fat. Hence the joke about the characteristic epithet of anchovies. Cf. Equit. 1323, ἐν ταῖσιν ἰοστεφάνοις οἰκεῖ ταῖς ἀρχαίαισιν Ἀθήναις. The Schol. quotes from Pindar αἱ λιπαράι καὶ ἰοστέφανοι Ἀθῆναι. Cf. Av. 1590, καὶ μὴν τὰ γ' ὀρνίθια λιπαρὰ εἶναι πρέπει.—ἐπειδὴ εἶποι, quotiens quis dixisset. A. Müller, who well compares Ran. 923, ἐπειδὴ ταῦτα ληρήσειε, is wrong in adding "expectes av." Cf. Il. xxiv. 14. Thuc. I. 49, ἐπειδὴ προσβάλλοιεν.

640. εὔρετο ἄν, 'he would gain (or, he might have gained) anything through that word λιπαράι.'—τιμὴν, 'the complimentary epithet.'

642. καὶ—δείξας. 'And also by showing how the popular governments are conducted in the allied cities.' This can hardly mean anything else than that the poet had pointed out some abuses under Cleon's boasted popular government. This, we may fairly suppose, was the real ground of Cleon's enmity. See Thuc. vii. 55, πόλεσι—δημοκρατουμέναις ὥσπερ καὶ αὐτοί. Aves 125, ἀριστοκρατεῖσθαι δῆλος εἰ ζητῶν. Eccl. 945, εἰ δημοκρατούμεθα.

"Hoc versu Aristophanes respicit Babylonios, qua fabula demonstraverat quam male haberentur socii." A. Müller.

643. τοιγάρτοι. 'And for this very reason (viz. from Cleon's enmity) people will now come, when they bring you the tribute from the cities, with an earnest desire to see that most excellent poet, who ran the risk of saying before all the Athenians that which was honest.'—ὅστις, qui ausus sit, an exegesis of τὸν ἄριστον. See 57 and 982.—τὸν φόρον, cf. 505. They will come to the theatre, not at the Lenaea, but at the Greater Dionysia; and they will come just because Cleon has 'made a martyr' of him. A. Müller thinks the sense is, 'they will care more for seeing him than for bringing the tribute;' but the mention of the tribute merely fixes the time of the visit.

646. οἷτω δέ. 'And so too it is (viz. through the same prosecution) that his fame for boldness has by this time reached even distant parts (as it is plain that it has), when even the Sultan asked,' &c. This must, of course, not be confounded with οὕτως ὥστε καὶ βασιλεὺς κ.τ.λ.

648. αὐτοῖς, ipsos. 'He asked first about the principal parties themselves, which of them is superior in their fleet, and next about your poet, which side he abused roundly; for he said those men had turned out the best, and would gain a decided victory in the war, by having such a poet for an adviser.' For γεγενῆσθαι A. Müller reads τε γενέσθ' ἂν, a bad alteration, if only from the elision. If men have become better or braver through following certain advice, the inference is they will be victorious in the end. The King spoke, of course, of the condition the Athenians had already attained through the poet's teaching. The comment of the Schol., τούτους σωφρονίζεσθαι καὶ γίνεσθαι βελτίους, does not indicate a different reading, but an imperfect perception of the meaning. We might with more probability read τούτους δ' ἂν ἔφη—τε γενέσθαι.—πολὺ, the usual construction with νικᾶν. So inf. 1117. Aesch. Cho. 1041, ἴσχε, μὴ φοβοῦ νικᾶν πολὺ. Thuc. i. 49, πολὺ ἐνίκων. But ib. i. 29 we have ἐνίκησαν οἱ Κερκυραῖοι παρὰ πολὺ. In Vesp. 726 νικᾶν πολλῶ.

652. διὰ ταῦθ'. 'That is why the Lacedaemonians make overtures for peace, and want to get back Aegina, viz. that they may take it from your poet,' and not from the citizens generally (Schol.). The Aldine and the Schol. have διὰ τοῦθ' sc. διὰ τὸ ἔχειν ὑμᾶς τὸν Ἀριστοφάνην ποιητὴν ἄριστον, S. The exact sense is unknown; but it is probable that either Aristophanes or Callistratus was a κληροῦχος in Aegina, which had been lately reduced by Athens, to the great indignation of the Doric confederacy. See Thuc. I. 139, II. 27. 108.

655. ὡς κωμωδήσει, 'since he will go on dealing out his satire where it is deserved.' For ἀφῆθ' the Rav. MS. has ἀφήσετε, others ἀφήσηθ', which seems a combination of both readings.

657. ὑποτείνων. The hand holding money is extended beneath, and the person taking it does so from above. In other cases (Pac. 908) the recipient ὑπέχει χεῖρα, and the giver drops the coin into the open hand.

658. κατάρδων, 'fostering your conceit,' lit. pouring on water as a gardener does to make plants grow. So ἡὺς ἀνόμην ἰδὼν, Vesp. 638. Schol. οὐ καταβρέχων ὑμᾶς τοῖς ἐπαίνοισι ὡς φυτά. The allusion is to Cleon's dishonest flatteries to obtain popularity.

665—691. The strophe with ἐπίρρημα of sixteen trochaic verses, corresponding to 692—718, the antistrophe and ἀντεπίρρημα. The strophe consists of cretics alternating with paeons, as sup. 210 seqq.—The subject now changes from the affairs of the poet to those of the Chorus, and a complaint is thus openly made of public prosecutions vexatiously laid against the old and the poor by the young and the powerful. This is a political grievance, independent of the immediate action of the play.

ibid. The sense is, 'Now, my Muse, inspire me with indignation as hot and sparkling as the fire made by my own charcoal.' Translate, 'Come hither, glowing Muse, with all the force of fire, come in good tune, maid of Acharnae! As a spark bounces up from charcoal of holm-oak, quickened by the wind from the fire-fan, when sprats are laid close by to be fried on the embers, and some of the slaves are shaking up Thasian pickle with a bright oily head, and others kneading the cakes, so bring to me, your fellow-townsmen, a lusty strain well-attuned and rustic in its tone.' — φέψαλος, a charcoal spark, which flies up with a crackling noise; cf. Vesp. 227. Ran. 859.—Hence ἐφεψαλώθη in Prom. Vinet. 370.—ῥιπίς, some kind of bellows or fan to produce currents of air, ῥιπαὶ ἀνέμων, in blowing charcoal; Eccl. 842. inf. 888.

670. ἐπανθρακίδες. Small fish to be broiled over the embers were first dipped in pickle of salt and oil, like the garum of the Romans. See Hesych. in θασία ἄλμη, and Phot. Lex. in θασίαν. It is called λιπαράμπυξ from the oil that rises to the top; hence it was shaken before use, ἀνακυκώμενον.

674. The epithets ἔντονος, εὔτονος, σύντονος, are musical terms; see Campbell on Plat. Sophist. p. 242 E. For ἀγροικότονον Elmsley and others read ἀγροικότερον from a Paris MS.

ὥς ἐμέ λαβοῦσα τὸν δημότην. 675

676. μεμφόμεσθα. Cf. Vesp. 1016, μέμψασθαι γὰρ τοῖσι θεαταῖς ὁ ποιητὴς νῦν ἐπιθυμεῖ. Thesm. 830, πόλλ' ἀναίγυρναῖκες ἡμεῖς ἐν δίκῃ μεμψαίμεθ' ἂν τοῖσιν ἀνδράσιν δικαίως. Nub. 576, ἡδίκημέναι γὰρ ὑμῖν μεμφόμεσθ' ἐναντίον.

677. ἀξίως. We are not maintained in our old age in a manner worthy of our services at Salamis.

679. οἵτινες. See sup. 645. Nub. 579.—ἐς γραφὰς, involving us in public suits. Some particular case is doubtless alluded to, which had excited some public indignation; and this formal exposure of it in the theatre would have all the influence of a 'leader in the Times.'

681. παρεξ-ηλημένον' κατατετριμμένον' τὸ ἀμυδρόν, ἀπὸ τῶν γλωσσίδων τῶν αὐλῶν τῶν κατατετριμμένων. Ἀριστοφάνης Οὐδὲν ὄντας κ.τ.λ. The sense is, 'when they are too old to speak articulately.'

682. οἷς Ποσειδῶν. 'Men whose only support is Poseidon the Securer,' i.e. who have nothing to lean upon in order to keep them from stumbling, save their services in the navy. Poseidon was worshipped at Athens and at Taenarus (Schol. on 510) under this attribute as the protector against earthquakes and storms at sea. Müller well cites Plutarch, Thes. 36, τοῦ θεοῦ ὃν ἀσφαλεῖον καὶ γαιήοχον προσονομάζομεν.

683. τονθορύζοντες. 'So, indistinctly muttering through age, we stand at the dock, seeing nothing whatever but the misty outline of the law-suit,' i.e. having no ideas beyond the vague one that we are being prosecuted by somebody for something.—λίθῳ, the bema in the law-court, the precise use and position of which we cannot tell. The Schol. confounds it with the bema in the Pnyx.—ἡλύγην, cf. Thuc. vi. 36, ὅπως τῷ κοινῷ φόβῳ τὸ σφέτερον ἐπηλυγάζωνται. Hesych. ἡλύγη' σκιά' καὶ ἐπηλυγισμός, ἐπισκιασμός, σκότος.

685. ὁ δέ. 'But he, the prosecutor, having taken good care that young men should be advocates on his side, deals him (the defendant) a rap smartly, joining issue with his phrases well rounded,' i.e. to hurl at him like stones. Much difficulty has been felt at this passage, chiefly from the uncertainty whether νεανίας is the nominative or the accusative plural. As the ξυνήγοροι were public prosecutors, it is natural enough to say generally that in the action against the old man the accused has no chance against the energy and fluent combativeness of a parcel of young advocates. The construction ξυνηγορεῖν ἐαυτῷ is well illustrated by Soph. Trach. 813, ξυνηγορεῖς σιγῶσα τῷ κατηγορῷ. There is a similar passage in Vesp. 691—4, where the same word σπουδάειν is used in describing a collusion between the ξύνδικοι and ξυνήγοροι to let off a culprit on condition of sharing the bribe he offers. The ξυνήγορος there appears to call the σύνδικοι 'on his side,' μεθ' ἐαυτοῦ, and here Meineke is probably right in understanding "fictum senem defendendi studium." In fact, for ξυνηγορεῖν he should have said ξυνδικεῖν, but he ironically describes the determination of both to get the old man condemned. A. Müller has no sufficient reason for pronouncing ἐαυτῷ corrupt, and substituting ἐταίρῳ. Nor does Elmsley's conjecture νεανίαν appear necessary, since a proper pronounciation of the verse would make plain the construction intended.—For the position of the article cf. Equit. 205, ὅτι ἀγκύλαις ταῖς χερσὶν ἀρπάζων φέρει. Vesp. 554. Nub. 230. Thesm. 456, ἅτ' ἐν ἀγροῖσι τοῖς λαχάνοις αὐτὸς τραφέις.

687. ἀνελκίσας. 'He has him up and questions him, setting traps of words, mangling, confusing, and bothering a man as old as Tithonus.' Σκανδάλῃθρον is the piece of bent wood in a trap, which when knocked away allows the door or the weight to fall.—σπαράττων, cf. Pac. 641, εἴτ' ἂν ὑμεῖς τοῦτον ὥσπερ κυνίδι' ἐσπαράττετε.

690. λύζει, 'he sobs.' Oed. Col. 1621, λύγον ἔκλαιον πάντες.

πρὸς τάδε τίς ἀντερεῖ Μαρψίας;

τῷ γὰρ εἰκὸς ἄνδρα κυφόν, ἡλίκον Θουκυδίδην,

The Schol. records a var. lect. ἀλύνει, 'he is beside himself,' and this is adopted by Meineke. —οὔ, the genitive of price; 'what I ought to have bought a coffin for, that (sum) I leave court condemned to pay.' Cf. 830. The dead, or perhaps only the bones of the dead, were sometimes inclosed in wooden coffers, κέδροι (Alcest. 365), λάρρακες (Thuc. II. 34), σοροί (II. XXIII. 91), κοίλη χηλὸς (Q. Smyrnaeus I. 797).

692. ταῦτα πῶς κ.τ.λ. 'How can such proceedings be reasonable,—to ruin a poor grey-haired old man in the law-court, who has many a time taken a part in our toils and wiped off hot manly sweat, and plenty of it too, when he showed himself a brave man at Marathon in the service of the state?'—πολλὰ δὴ, a pregnant combination, as Ran. 697, οἱ μεθ' ὑμῶν πολλὰ δὴ χοῖ πατέρες ἐναυμάχησαν.

699. εἶτα κ.τ.λ. 'Then too at Marathon, when we were men indeed, we were the pursuers; but now we are pursued, and no mistake, by good-for-nothing fellows, and beside that are caught.'—ὅτ' ἤμεν, cum vigebamus. Lysist. 665, ὅτ' ἤμεν ἔτι. There seems, however, no objection to construing Μαραθῶνι ὅτ' ἤμεν, like Cicero's cum essem in Tusculano.—διώκειν and ἐλεῖν, of course, have the double sense, military and judicial. Cf. Vesp. 1207, Φάυλλον—εἶλον διώκων Λοιδορίας ψήφουν δυοῖν.

701. Μαρψίας. Some young advocate unknown to fame.

702. Θουκυδίδην. The son of Melesias, and the head of a faction against the war-policy of Pericles. It is likely that the poet, as the advocate of peace, would express his sympathy with any wrongs this man had sustained, possibly through the influence of Pericles, by whom he was banished B.C. 445, but returned, as it would appear from this passage. Vesp. 947, ὅπερ ποτε φεύγων ἔπαθε καὶ Θουκυδίδης, where φεύγων means 'in making his defence.'

ἐξολέσθαι συμπλακέντα τῇ Σκυθῶν ἐρημίᾳ, κατεβόησε δ' ἂν κεκραγὼς τοξότας τρισχιλίου, περιετόξευσεν δ' ἂν αὐτοῦ τοῦ πατρὸς τοὺς ξυγγενεῖς.

ἀλλ' ἐπειδὴ τοὺς γέροντας οὐκ ἔαθ' ὕπνου τυχεῖν,

704. συμπλακέντα, 'having to grapple with.' A word derived from the συμπλοκή of wrestlers. From κατεπάλαισε in 710 it seems likely that some relation of the 'chattering advocate' was a professional wrestler, as his father perhaps (712) had been a Scythian Bowman (sup. 54), whence the joke of calling him a 'Scythian wilderness.' Perhaps however the verb only contains a joke on the name Εὐαθλος, who appears from Vesp. 592 to have been a somewhat notorious ρήτωρ. Dr Holden (Onomast. in v.) quotes a fragment from our poet's Ὀλκάδες, (xiii. Dind.) ἔστι τις πονηρὸς ἡμῖν τοξότης συνήγορος... ὥσπερ Εὐαθλος παρ' ὑμῖν τοῖς νέοις.

708. ἡνίκ' ἦν. See 699. Or, with Bergk, 'when Thucydides was Thucydides indeed.'

709. τὴν Ἀχαιάν. The epithet of 'goddess of grief' was given to Ceres as mourning for the loss of her daughter (the moon, or rather, perhaps, the summer, stolen below the earth).

In this aspect, and as a Chthonian power, she was held in awe, and regarded as dangerous to meet in her wanderings over the earth. Herod., v. 61, speaking of the Phoenician Gephyreans, says that they had at Athens a temple of their own, and certain mystical rites to Ἀχαιῇ Δημήτηρ.—ἠνέσχετο, he would not have tolerated or put up with her ill-omened presence. Or, with the Schol., we may supply καταβοᾷν αὐτοῦ. Perhaps there was a superstition that the goddess uttered loud wailings in grief, and that it was an evil omen so to meet her. The Schol. refers it to the noise of cymbals and tambourines, but he wrongly derives the word from ἦχος. Hesych. Ἀχαιὰ ἐπίθετον Δήμητρος, ἀπὸ τοῦ περὶ τὴν Κόρην ἄχους, ὅπερ ἐποιεῖτο ἀναζητοῦσα αὐτήν.

712. ὑπερετόξευσεν is a probable conjecture of Mr Blaydes. In the sense of περιγενέσθαι we should rather expect the genitive, perhaps.—αὐτοῦ, sc. of Cephisodemus.

714. ὅπως ἂν, 'so that,' result rather than intention being expressed.

716. ὁ Κλεινίου, Alcibiades. See on 614.

717. ἐξελαύνειν. The sense evidently is that in future all public prosecutions are to be distributed under two heads, 'young,' and 'old;' and if any one is to be made ἀτιμος or to be banished, it must be done through an advocate of his own age. There is considerable difficulty in κἄν φύγῃ τις, the aorist not being used in the sense of φεύγειν, 'to be a defendant,' but signifying 'to be banished,' which here cannot apply. A. Müller's explanation is very unsatisfactory, "ἐξελαύνειν h.l. significat in jus vocare. φύγῃ, i.e. ἣν μὴ πίθηται, si hanc legem negliget." The text cannot be right as it stands, because τις is necessary to the metre, and this makes it necessary to regard φύγῃ as a verb, whereas it should rather be the substantive, φυγῇ. Cf. Eur. Med. 453, πᾶν κέρδος ἡγοῦ ζημιουμένη φυγῇ. The Schol. took the sense rightly, κἄν ἐξελαύνειν δέη κἄν φυγῇ ζημιοῦν. As it is impossible to get rid of τις (unless by reading καὶ φυγῇ δὲ ζημιοῦν), it seems that ζημιοῖ (the subjunctive) must be read. The sense is, καὶ, ἂν τις ζημιοῖ τινα φυγῇ, (ζημιοῦν) τὸν γέροντα κ.τ.λ. The infinitive seems to have crept in either from ζημιοῦν as a marginal explanation, or from confounding ζημιοῖ with the preceding infinitive.

719. Returning to the stage Dicaeopolis sets up some marks or boundary stones enclosing his own private market; to which all shall have access but members of the war-party.

722. ἐφ' ᾧ τε. 'On condition they sell to me, but not to Lamachus.' See sup. 625. It is clear that the syntax here is not Λαμάχῳ ἔξεστι μὴ πωλεῖν. That would signify 'Lamachus has the right of not selling at all, unless he pleases.' See Aesch. Eum. 899, ἔξεστι γὰρ μοι μὴ λέγειν ἃ μὴ τελῶ, and the note. In the sense 'Lamachus is not allowed to sell,' Λαμάχῳ δὲ οὐ would be required.

723. ἀγορανόμους, 'Clerks of the market.' As he says this, he exhibits three good tough thongs of bull's hide, made, he adds, by a somewhat obscure joke, of diseased and swollen hide, δέρμα μοχθηροῦ βοός, Equit. 316. Müller supposes there is an allusion to λέπειν, i.e. δέρειν, 'to excoriate.' The Schol. says the town of Lepreum in Elis is meant, as if the ἰμάντες were strangers and real persons from 'Mange-town;' but he adds, ἀμεινον δὲ λέγειν ὅτι τόπος ἔξω τοῦ ἁστέος καλούμενος, ἐνθα τὰ βυσεία ἦν. After τοὺς λαχόντας the word ἰμάντας is added παρὰ προσδοκίαν. Compare for the office of ἀγορανόμος, a taxor or aedile, Vesp. 1407.

726. Φασιανός, a play on φάσις, an information against contraband goods, inf. 819. The word is used as an epithet (apparently) of horses in Nub. 109, and Φασιανικός occurs Av. 68. Schol. ἐστι καὶ πόλις τῆς Σκυθίας Φάσις, ὁμώνυμος τῇ ποταμῷ.

727. καθ' ἣν, in accordance with which; according to the terms of which. Exit Dicaeopolis to fetch the inscription. Meanwhile a Megarian, of meagre look, and leading his two little daughters by the hand, enters the orchestra. He talks a patois of the Doric, and his mission is to sell his daughters for slaves rather than to let them starve at home; but a sudden idea strikes him of selling them dressed up as pigs. This conceit, showing that they are worth more money as market-stock, is made the occasion of some coarse joking on the ambiguous sense of χοῖρος.

730. τὸν φίλιον. 'By Zeus the god of friendship,'—an appropriate invocation in one who has long suffered from war. Cf. Eur. Andr. 603, τὸν σὸν λιπούσα φίλιον ἐξεκώμασε νεανίου μετ' ἀνδρός.—ἅπερ ματέρα, sc. τὴν τρέφουσάν με.

731. πονηρὰ κόρια κᾶθλιον πατρός A. Müller. κᾶθλιω Meineke. The MS. Rav. has κᾶριχ', which lends some slight support to Blaydes' conjecture χοῖρ' ἀθλίου πατρός. But it is more likely that κᾶριχον, like Ἰσμῆνιχος inf. 954, was a ὑποκόρισμα, real or coined by the poet, for κοῦραι or κόραι. The addition of καὶ (κᾶθλιον) is not according to Attic usage.

ὥς ναὶ τὸν Ἑρμᾶν, εἵπερ ἰξεῖτ' οἴκαδιν, τὰ πρᾶτα πειρασεῖσθε τᾶς λιμοῦ κακῶς.

732. ἄμβατε, 'get up on to the stage.' We can only explain this word by supposing the Megarian to be on the level below, i. e. the orchestra, from which there was one, if not more ascents to the stage. So Equit. 169, where the sausage-seller is asked ἐπαναβῆναι καὶ ἐπὶ ἐλεὸν, to mount yet further and higher on to his own portable table, after being invited ἀναβαίνειν in v. 149.—μῦδδαν, i. e. μᾶζαν. Perhaps a tub of meal was seen standing in the market. Cf. 835.

733. τὰν γαστέρα, said παρὰ προσδοκίαν for τὸν νοῦν or τὰ ὦτα, from the starving condition of the children.

734. πεπρᾶσθαι. The alternative offered them is to be sold as slaves, or to starve; and they choose the former. Cf. 779.

737. ζαμίαν. As slaves were κτήματα, no one would invest in a property that would prove a loss, viz. from the starved look of the girls. The Schol.

misses the point, ἐπεὶ κόραι ἦσαν καὶ οὐ χοῖροι.

738. Μεγαρικά. Probably the Megarians were not noted for honesty in their dealings. Bergk (ap. Müller), referring to Vesp. 57, μηδ' αὖ γέλωτα Μεγαρόθεν κεκλεμμένον, thinks 'a comic trick,' after the fashion of Susarion, may here be meant.—σκευάσας, 'I will dress you up as pigs, and say 'tis pigs I bring.' There can be no doubt, from the context, that the children are made to walk on hands and knees, with a mask imitating a snout, ῥυγχίον, 744, and a kind of shoe and glove which suggested 'petitoes.'—περίθεσθε, 'put on you.' Thesm. 380, περίθου νυν τόνδε, sc. στέφανον.

742. οἴκαδιν, cf. 779. If you return home, he says, i. e. if you play your parts so badly that you are not sold as pigs, you will experience the extremity of hunger and be in a still more miserable plight.

745. σάκκον, a poke. We cannot say precisely how the affair was managed, and are left to draw our inferences from the jokes that follow on the ambiguous sense of χοῖρος. At present they are to get into a bag, and growl and squeak to attract customers, as if they were sucking-pigs used for initiation into the mysteries; see on Pac. 375. Ran. 337.—γρυλλίζειν, our word 'growl,' occurs in Plut. 307, where it is also applied to pigs' voices.

748. καρυξῶ. 'I will summon (or tell the crier to summon) Dicaeopolis (that I may know) where he is.'—ὅπα, sc. εὐρῶ αὐτόν. For the accusative cf. Eur. Hec. 148, κήρυσσε θεοὺς τοὺς οὐρανίδας. Müller and Meineke adopt Hamaker's conjecture, ἐγὼν δὲ καρυξῶ. Δικαιοπόλις δὲ πᾶ; 'I will tell the people that you (the pigs) are for sale,—but where's Dicaeopolis!'—Dicaeopolis, having gone into the house to fetch the στήλη (727), now comes forth at the summons. He finds the very first customer to be one of the long-excluded Megarians, and exclaims, as in surprise, 'What! a man of Megara!'

751. διαπεινᾶμες. 'We sit by the fire and—starve.' He should have said διαπίνομεν, 'we have drinking-bouts,' and so the other pretends to understand him. 'Well, and pleasant too,' he says, 'if a pipe (piper) is present.' Plat. Resp. iv. p. 420 fin., ἐπιστάμεθα γὰρ τοὺς κεραμέας πρὸς τὸ πῦρ διαπίνοντας τε καὶ εὐωχουμένους. Herod. v. 18, ὡς δὲ ἀπὸ δέλπρον ἐγένοντο, διαπίνοντες εἶπαν οἱ Πέρσαι τάδε.

753. οἶα δῆ, sc. πράττομεν. We fare as we fare, and no better.

754. ἐμπορευόμεν. 'When I set out thence as a trader' (ἐμπορος), i. e. 'when I left to go to market.'—πρόβουλοι, according to the Schol., whom Müller follows, means στρατηγοί. The ἄνδρες πρόβουλοι τοῦτ' ἔπραττον τῇ πόλει,

Πρόβουλος is one of the characters in the Lysistrata. Our word 'provisional committee' seems to give the idea. 'Certain commissioners, he says, were trying to negotiate for the city as speedy and as—bad a death as possible.' He should have said ὅπως σωθῆμεν, but purposely uses the wrong word. Cf. 72.

757. αὐτίκ' ἄρ' κ.τ.λ. 'Then you'll soon be rid of your troubles! M. Of course' (τί μῆν). Cf. inf. 784. Pac. 370. Cobet reads ἀπηλλάξεσθε, and it is surprising that on his mere dictum so many editors should admit this unusual form. 'Ἀλλάζομαι is one of the passive futures analogous to λέξομαι, φανήσομαι, τιμήσομαι, and the sense which he requires, ἀπηλλαγμένοι ἔσεσθε, is sufficiently conveyed by the simple form. See Nov. Lect. p. 241.

758. τί δ' ἄλλο. 'Well! what else at Megara? How is corn sold?'—'With us 'tis highly prized, like the gods.' A play on τιμή, 'honour' and 'value,' 'prize' and 'price.'—πῶς, i. e. πόσους. Equit. 480, πῶς οὖν ὁ τυρὸς ἐν Βοιωτοῖς ὦνιος;—The form Μεγαροῖ, like οἴκοι, Πυθοῖ &c., implies an old nominative in the singular, whereas τὰ Μέγαρα was the Attic name, in Latin changed to Megara of the first declension feminine.

760. ἡμὲς, you Athenians, viz. by occupying the harbour of Nisaea, Thuc. iii. 42, 51, an event which had happened two years before. Müller thinks there is a play on the sense ἄρχειν ἁλός, 'to be rulers of the sea.'

761. σκόροδα. Leeks were a common produce in Megaris. See Pac. 246, 1000.

762. ὅκκ' ἐσβάλητε. See Thuc. ii. 31, iv. 66, who says the Athenians regularly made a raid into Megaris twice a year, till the capture of the harbour of Nisaea.—μύες, 'like field-mice,' which do mischief by gnawing roots and bulbs underground.—πάσσακι, allied to πασσάλω, 'with a peg' or short stick to scratch them up.—ἀγλίθας should mean 'chives' or 'cloves' of garlick, rather than κεφαλὰς (Schol.). Vesp. 680, μὰ Δί' ἀλλὰ παρ' Εὐχαρίδου καυτὸς τρεῖς γ' ἀγλίθας μετέπεμψε.

καταλαμβάνειν εἶναι παχείας. Δν.

768. σύ. As if he had said
ὦ μωρὲ σύ. In the nominative this pronoun is never enclitic nor (probably) is it ever used without some emphasis on the person,—a remark which young students will do well to verify for themselves.

770. τάνδε, referring to ἁδε above. This is the reading of the Ravenna, and it gives a good sense. Elmsley proposed θᾶσθε τόνδε.—τᾶς ἀπιστίας, 'the incredularity of the man!' Cf. 64.
87. The MSS. give τὰς ἀπιστίας.
The plural seems unlikely when τὴν ἀπιστίαν would have served as well: ἀπιστία occurs however in Hes. Op. 372. Most of the editors read θᾶσθε τοῦδε (τῷδε Mein.)
τὰς ἀπιστίας. When abstract nouns are used in the plural,

e.g. μανίαι, ἀρεταί, τόλμαι, 'mad-fits,' 'accomplishments,' 'acts of daring,' &c., it is because they express special acts, or examples of a general princi-

seasoned) salt.' Hom. Il. xxiii.

The MSS. and Schol. agree in σιγῆς or σιγᾶς, but σιγῆν is cited from Gregory of Corinth, which supports the common reading οὐ χρήσθα σιγῆν, non debebas silere; a presumed Doricism for οὐκ ἐχρῆν σε σιγᾶν. In the reading above χρήσθα = χρήσεις, as in Soph. Aj. 1373, σοὶ δὲ ὄρᾶν ἔξεσθ' ἃ χρῆς, 'you may do as you like.'

779. ἀποισῶ. Seesup. 742—3. —ναὶ τὸν Ἑρμᾶν, sc. τὸν ἐμ-πολαῖον.

782. πέντ' ἐτῶν, 'in five years.' The usual genitive of the limitation of time, past or present. Elmsley gave these two words to the Megarian instead of Dicæopolis.

784. σά μάν; cf. 757.

791. From χνοῦς, the first hair or down of pubescence, came χνοᾶζω (Oed. R. 742) and χνοαίνω, from which latter the compound aorist is here formed. Either the digamma sound χνοϜ or the lengthened form of the root χνοι must be assumed on account of the metre. The Ravenna MS. has ἀλλ' ἂν, Aldus and others αἰ δ' ἂν, at the beginning of the verse. Meineke's reading, αἶκα παχυνθῇ δ' ἀναχνοανθῇ θ' ὕστριχι, is justly rejected by Müller.

793. τὰφροδίτῃ. The pig was the special victim of Demeter, and as such was used in the mysteries, sup. 764.

799. ἃ καὶ δίδως, 'if only you offer it,' is the reading of the MSS., and it seems as good as Porson's ἃ καὶ διδῶς. So Soph. Phil. 297, φῶς δ' καὶ σώζει μ' αἰεί. The Schol. however has ἅτινα ἂν παραβάλῃς αὐταῖς.

801. ἐρεβίνθους has an ambiguous sense, which it is surprising that A. Müller should deny; see Schol. in loc.—φιβάλεως, the accusative plural from a nominative of the same form, like τῶν κορώνων in Pac. 628. This peculiar form was used in the nomenclature of certain varieties of the fig. The commentators add from Bekker's Anecdota two other sorts, δαμερίππεως and χελιδόνεως. Like the duplex ficus of Horace, this fig probably had a shape that was fancifully thought symbolical of the male sex. Hence the point of the verse ὥς ὁξὺ κ.τ.λ. Compare διφόρου συκῆς θρία, Eccl. 708.

807. ροθιάζειν, to make a ρόθος or smacking of the lips in gobbling up the figs.—Ἡράκλεις, perhaps in reference to his being the god of gluttony.

808. Τραγασαῖα, as if from τρώγειν, 'Eat-onians.' Tragasae was a city in the Troad. Inf. 853 the same word is used to express the stench of a he-goat.

809. ἀλλ' οὔτι κ.τ.λ. Bergk and Meineke give this to the Megarian, for the greater regularity in the couplets. A. Müller adheres to the MSS., and thinks there is thus more point in the confession of the Megarian, that he took up one fig from his daughters, viz. from sheer starvation.

811. ἀστείω, 'a very pretty pair.'—πόσου, 'at what price must I buy these pigs from you? Say.' The genitive of price occurs also 830, 1055. For the dative cf. Pac. 1261, τοῦτω γ' ἐγὼ τὰ δόρατα ταῦτ' ὠνήσομαι. Ran. 1229, ἐγὼ πρίωμαι τῷδε; Antig. 1171, τᾶλλ' ἐγὼ καπνοῦ σκιάς οὐκ ἂν πριαίμην ἀνδρὶ πρὸς τὴν ἡδονήν.

813—4. The price asked by the Megarian consists of the very commodities his country had been wont to produce.—τροπηλῖς, a word not elsewhere found, is 'a rope of onions' (or rather 'garlick,' κρόμμνον being properly 'an onion,' πράσον 'a leek,' γῆτειον also some kind of leek; cf. Ran. 621—2).

818. A practical example is now given of the evil complained of sup. 517—23. An informer comes forward, and on the strength of the Μεγαρικὸν ψήφισμα lays an embargo on the Megarian's goods.

819. φανῶ, I shall denounce them by the process called φάσις. See sup. 726.

822. κλάων. 'You shall catch it for your Doric slang! Drop that poke directly, I say!' Müller compares βακίλων, Pac. 1072. So πατερίζειν, Vesp. 652. καρδαμίζειν Thesm. 617.—σάκον, elsewhere (145) σάκκον. See Lysist. 1211. Eccl. 502. Compare lacus with λάκκος, ὄχος with ὄκχος.

823. Hesych. and the Schol. φαντάζομαι συκοφαντοῦμαι. Dicaeopolis had gone into the house (815), but is loudly called for by the Megarian. Accordingly he appears with his triple thong (723).

826. τί δὴ μαθὼν. 'Who taught you to throw light on things without a wick?' i.e. to inform without right or reason. Cf. 917.—οὐ γὰρ κ.τ.λ. 'Why, am I not to throw light on the wicked works of enemies?' The logic is about on a par with 308.—For the formula κλάων γε σὺ Müller cites Eccl. 786 and 1027, and for ἐτέρωσε τρέχειν, 'to run off in the opposite direction,' or 'the other way,' Av. 991 and 1260. The joke here perhaps consists in the wish that informers may migrate from Athens to Sparta.—A few whacks with the thong send the informer scampering.

830. ἦς τιμῆς ἀπέδον. 'The price at which you sold the pigs.'

832. οὐκ ἐπιχώριον. 'That χαῖρειν is not a resident in our unfortunate country,' 'is not in fashion with us at present.'

833. Müller and Bergk retain the common reading πολυπραγμοσύνης, as a genitive of exclamation (64); but this idiom seems to require the article, or at least some epithet. The MS. Rav. gives the nominative, 'May my meddlesome wish return to me;' and so Meineke and Dr Holden. The Schol. interprets the genitive 'may it (i.e. τὸ χαῖρειν) turn to me (ἐμοί) for my meddling.' (ἐμοί Mein.) Cf. Lysist. 915, εἰς ἐμὲ τράποιτο. Pac. 1063, ἐς κεφαλὴν σοί.

 whether the resemblance between pavio and pasco (pav— sco), pāvi, is accidental, or results from the common idea of striking or colliding, like φλάν, σποδεῖν, Pac. 1306, it is perhaps rash to decide.—ἐφ' ἅλι, 'to eat your meal now with salt to it,' i.e. as there is neither salt nor meal at home (732, 760).

 the French term café au lait.
 —Usually ἄλες, not ἄλς, means
 'salt.' Cf. 521.

 longer divided in opinion, but unanimous in favour of peace, systems, each consisting of a distich of iambic tetrameters followed by three iambic di-meters and a choriambic with anacrusis, or, as Müller calls it, a logaoedic verse.

 mon reading πημανεῖται was corrected by L. Dindorf. Elmsley's reading πημανεῖ τις seems equally probable. Schol. βλάwanting of the medial sense.

 Mr Hailstone would retain the vulgate, comparing ἴσθι πημα-plaining 'will not pay the penalty of cheating you.' The allusion would again be to the blows of the thong; 'he will not

Bacch. 344, μηδ' ἐξομόρξει μωρίαν τὴν σὴν ἐμοί, i.e. leave the stain or impression of it on me. Hence the allusion to the 'clean cloak' which he will not soil δαῖων τὴν ἀγορὰν, 845. Cf. φανὴ σισύρα, Eccl. 347. The same notion attaches to ἀναπλήσει in 847. Cf. 382, and Nub. 1023. So also Thesm. 389, τί γὰρ οὗτος ἡμᾶς οὐκ ἐπισμῇ τῶν κακῶν.

844. ὥστιεῖ, 'you will not jostle with.' Cf. 25, 28.

849. The MSS. give αἰὲ κεκαρμένος. Hesych. αἰὲ ἐπὶ τοῦ αἰέ, ἔως. Between αὖ (Elmsl.), εἰ (Müller) and ἀποκεκαρμένος (Reisig), it is not easy to choose.—μοιχὸν, "comice significat tonsuram qua utebatur Cratinus." Müller, who adds that the word is used παρὰ προσδοκίαν for κῆπον, for which he cites Hesych. in νν. κῆπος and μιᾷ μαχαίρᾳ ('a razor').—Cratinus is called περιπόνηρος by a parody on a lame engineer, Artemo, who had to ride in a carriage to inspect his works, and was thence called περιφόρητος. Müller, who refers, after others, to Plutarch, Vit. Pericl. ch. 37, adds that even this phrase was borrowed from the lazy habits of an older Artemo, a contemporary of Aristides, Athen. p. 533 E. Mr Green thinks the poet merely intended to call Cratinus πονηρὸς, as Anacreon ap. Athen. had called the older Artemo.

851. ταχὺς ἄγαν. "Negligentia et festinatio Cratini in componendis fabulis carpitur." Müller.

852. For the double genitive with ὄζειν see Pac. 529, τοῦ μὲν γὰρ ὄζει κρομμυοξερεγμίας. Vesp. 1060, τῶν ἱματίων ἰζήσει δεξιότητος.—Τραγασαίου, see on 808. Pac. 814, Γοργόνες—μιαροὶ τραγομάσχαλοι.

Thesm. 949, in both which places he is ridiculed as πένης. According to the Schol. he was ζωγράφος, a painter of animals. Lysistratus is mentioned in Vesp. 789, where he is called ὁ σκωπτόλης, and as a 'scurra' or 'diner-out,' ib. 1302, 1308. Here he is called a discredit to his own δημόται, the Χολαργεῖς, of the Acamantid tribe.

856. περιαιουργός, 'wrapped in the scarlet mantle of his own misdoings,' κακοῖς βεβαμμένος, Schol. Perhaps he was one of the 'shabby-genteel,' who affected a fine dress at dinner-parties. The general description of his poverty, 'starving more than thirty days every month,' may perhaps have some reference to his character as a parasite. Müller quotes the same phrase in Eccl. 808.

860. A countryman from Boeotia now enters the market, attended by a servant and other churls, and loaded with good things, which form a contrast to the utter destitution of the Megarian. The hostilities between Athens and Thebes since the invasion of Plataea had doubtless suspended all intercourse, and deprived the Attic market of its usual supplies from Boeotia. Cf. Pac. 1003. Lysist. 703.

ib. τὰν τύλαν. 'This hump

(back) of mine is badly tired.' Cf. 954, where ὑποκύπτειν has reference to the kneeling of a camel when the load is put on him. Not seeing this, and interpreting τύλη 'a porter's knot,' Mr Green, on 954, needlessly remarks that 'a man could hardly be said to stoop under his own shoulder.' The meaning merely is, 'bend down your hump.' The camel was known to the poet; cf. Vesp. 1035. Av. 278. Herod. vi. 25, αὐτίκα Καρίην ἔσχον οἱ Πέρσαι, τὰς μὲν ἐθελοντὴν τῶν πολλῶν ὑποκυψάσας, τὰς δὲ ἀνάγκη προσηγάγοντο. Any kind of lump or hard patch of skin was called τύλη. Hesych. τύλαι· αἱ ἐν ταῖς χερσὶ φλύκταιναι, ὡς περισσὰ τινα, καὶ τοῖς ὤμοις.—τύλη· τῆς καμήλου ἀπὸ τῆς ῥάχεως τὸ ἄκρον δέρμα. The word was also written τύλος. Theocr. xvi. 32, ὥσπερ τις μακελὰ τετυλωμένος ἐνδοθε χεῖρας.

861. Ἴσμηνία. He seems to address a slave, though the name (compare Ἴσμήνη) should rather belong to a Theban citizen, as Lysist. 697, ἥ τε Θηβαία φίλη παῖς εὐγενὴς Ἴσμηνία. It is possible that here and inf. 954 (where he uses a ὑποκόμισμα, 'my little Ismenias'), the man addresses himself.—κατάθου, 'put down that penny-royal gently,' i.e. so as not to knock off the flowers, inf. 869. The Attics used the form βληχῶν or βληχώ, as the Schol. tells us. Hence in Pac. 712 we have κυκεῶν, βληχωνίας, a posset flavoured with peppermint.

862. ὑμὲς κ.τ.λ. The same persons, perhaps, are seen on the stage who before made the Ὀδομάντων στρατὸς (156) and the λόχοι of Lamachus (575).—πάρα, πάρεστε. The custom of coming to market in companies with a pipe or a guitar is still common in Romance countries.

863. τοῖς ὀστίνοις, 'with those bone flutes of yours.' The Thebans, like the Acharnians (Theoc. vii. 71), were famed for their skill on the pipes. Müller quotes Maximus Tyrius, Diss. xxiii. 2. 440, Θηβαῖοι αὐλητικὴν ἐπιτηδεύουσι, καὶ ἔστιν ἡ δι' αὐλῶν μούσα ἐπιχώριος τοῖς Βοιωτοῖς. Schol. ἐσπούδαζον δὲ οἱ Θηβαῖοι περὶ τὸν αὐλόν. Pipes made of hollow bones are often mentioned, and are still used by savage tribes. Propert. iv. 3. 20, 'et struxit querulus rauca per ossa tubas.'—φυσῆτε, a word applied to pipers, as Pac. 953, σάφ' οἶδ' ὅτι φυσῶντι καὶ πονομένῳ προσδῶστέε δῆπον.—κυνὸς πρωκτός was a proverb, illustrated by Müller, from Eccl. 255, ἐς κυνὸς πυγὴν ὀρᾶν. ('Go and be blowed yourselves' would save the vulgarism.)

864. Again, as it would seem, Dicæopolis makes use of his thong over the backs of the pipers, whom he calls βομβαύλιοι, 'drones,' by a pun on βομβύλιος, 'a bumble bee.'—Χαιριδεῖς, as from Χαιριδεὺς (like λυκιδεὺς, κυνιδεὺς), 'cubs of Chæris,' the bad flute-player, sup. 16.

867. Between ἐπιχαρίττω γ' (MS. Rav., Bergk), i. e. ἐπεχαρίσω, 'you are very kind,' and ἐπιχαρίττω, for ἐπιχαρίτως, sc. ἀπολούνται, the choice is difficult. Xen. Apol. Socr. § 4, πολλάκις ἀδικοῦντας ἢ ἐκ τοῦ λόγου οἰκτίσαντες ἢ ἐπιχαρίτως εἰπόντας ἀπέλυσαν. Meineke reads ἐπεχαρίζα μὲν ξένε. Schol. ἀντὶ τοῦ κεχαριτωμένως καὶ κεχαρισμένως.—Iolaus, a Theban hero, as Diocles was a Megarian, sup. 775.

868. Θείβαθε Elmsley, and so Dr Holden. Müller thinks that Aristophanes did not really understand the patois of Boeotia, and that he may have used forms not strictly correct.

869. ἀπέκιξαν. Hesych. writes ἀπέκειξαν, which he explains ἀποπείσαιν φυσᾶντες ἐποίησαν. Said to be from a verb κίκω, though some refer it to an obsolete active of κείμει.—τάνθεια, 'the bloom.' In labiate plants the fragrance is strongest in the flower. Hence γλάχων' ἀνθεῦσαν Theocr. v. 56.

870. πρίασο. Sup. 34 πρίω. Even the Attics used ἐπίστασο, τίθεσο (Pac. 1039) as well as the contracted forms.

871. ὀρταλίχων, 'chickens,' Aesch. Ag. 54, πόνον ὀρταλίχων ὀλέσαντες. The 'four-winged locusts' seem alluded to inf. 1082. Müller assents to Elmsley's opinion, that the four-legged game is really meant, as if he had said τῶν τετραπόδων. The antithesis, perhaps, would be more marked, if between birds and beasts.

872. κολλικοφάγε. Like κολύρα, Pac. 123, the κόλλιξ was some kind of coarse cake or bun, perhaps of barley or spelt, or like the Scotch bannock.—Βοιωτίδιον, like δακτυλίδιον (ῖ), οἰκίδιον, Ἑρμίδιον (Pac. 924).

874. ψιαθούς, 'mats.' It is a favourite custom of the poet to combine a number of things of the most heterogeneous description. Cf. Vesp. 676. Eccl. 606.

875. ἀτταγᾶς, 'woodcocks,' 'attagen Ionicus,' Hor. Epod. II. 54. Av. 297.—φαληρίς is probably a bald coot, the root φαλ meaning a white patch, as in φαλακρός.—τροχίλους, mentioned also in Pac. 1004 as a Boeotian bird, and in Av. 79, but we cannot identify the species.

876. Walsh, in his translation, neatly renders χειμῶν ὀρνιθίας 'fowl-weather.' The names of winds take this termination, as Καικίας, γονίας Aesch. Cho. 1067, συκοφαντίας Equit. 437.

879. σκάλοπας, 'moles.' The creatures next mentioned, be they otters, badgers, or weasels, are jocosely enumerated, though mere 'vermin,' in order to close the list with that most famous of delicacies, the Copaic eel. See Pac. 1004. Lys. 25. 702, παῖδα χρηστὴν κάγαπητὴν ἐκ Βοιωτῶν ἐγγέλων.—ἰκτίδας, possibly 'rabbits.' In Plaut. Capt. 184, 'nunc ictim tenes,' this creature is mentioned as inferior to a hare. In II. x. 335, κτιδέη κυνέη is interpreted a cap of weasel's or marten's skin.—Whether ἐνύδρους (R.) is an epithet, describing an otter or beaver, or a noun, and whether ἐνύδρεις or ἐνύδριαι is the true reading, must remain doubtful.

882. προσειπεῖν, viz. in the short address 885—7. Pac. 557, ἄσμενός σ' ἰδὼν προσειπεῖν βούλομαι τὰς ἀμπέλους. The Boeotian, in a parody from a verse of Aeschylus in the Ὀπλων κρίσις, δέσποινα πεντήκοντα Νηρηίδων κοράν, tells the biggest eel to come out of the basket, and perhaps it is seen wriggling on the stage.

884. κήπιχαρίτται, for ἐπιχάρισαι, 'oblige.' So the MS. Rav., and it seems as good as ἐπιχαρίττα, said to be for ἐπιχαρίζον (Etym. M. 367. 19), or ἐπιχαρίττε, which Bergk adopts.—For τῷδε others read τῶδε (i. e. τοῦδε, 'come out of this,') τείδε, 'here,' and τᾶδε.

886. χοροῖς, i. e. to the company at the ἐπινίκια, or dinner given to celebrate a dramatic victory. Cf. 1155.—Μορύχῳ, a well-known glutton, Vesp. 506. Pac. 1008. Müller thinks the mention of comic choruses is inappropriate in the mouth of the farmer: but he was a theatrical critic, sup. 9.

888. ῥιπίδα, cf 669.

890. μόλις, 'at last.' See on 266, and cf. 952.

891. ἀνθρακας. 'I will provide you with charcoal as a compliment to our lady-visitor,' viz. the eel. See sup. 34.

893. Mr Green reads ἐκφερ' αὐτὴν, with MS. Rav. For why, he asks, should the eel be taken in when the brazier was to be brought out? It is easy to answer, To prepare it for frying. There seems too an allusion to the introducing a stranger to the house, εἰσω κομίζον καὶ σὺ, Κασάνδραν λέγω, Aesch. Ag. 950. Besides, this would better account for the seller being anxious about the price, τιμὰ τᾶσδε, if it disappeared from his sight. But Müller also inclines to the Ravenna reading.—μηδὲ γὰρ, a parody on the celebrated parting of Admetus from his wife, Alcest. 374. If the form of the participle is correct (and the critics propose several changes), it suggests a form of the noun τεύτλανον, like λάχανον, φρύγανον, ὀρίγανον, or τεύτλανος like ῥάφανος. We have τεύτλον, 'beet-root,' as the proper 'fixings' for an eel, Pac. 1014.

896. ἀγορᾶς τέλος, 'a market-toll.' The Schol. B. on Iliad xxi. 203 makes a singular remark; ἐν τῷ ἀγορανομικῷ νόμῳ Ἀθηναίων διέσταλται ἰχθύων καὶ ἐγχελέων τέλη. As a reason, he gives the common opinion that eels are produced (συνίστανται) out of mud.

899. The Schol. recognizes ἰὼ for ἰών, ἀντὶ τοῦ ἐγὼ. (Compare the Italian io.) Meineke and Dr Holden read ἰών, against all MSS. There seems no objection to the participle, 'will you take thither when you go?'

900. Ἀθάναις, the dative of place, as sup. 697, Μαραθῶνι μὲν ὄτ' ἦμεν. Editors try their hands at some improvement, ἐν Ἀθάναις, Ἀθάνασ', ὅτι γ' ἐν Ἀθάναις, one MS. (perhaps rightly) giving ἔντ' for ἔστ', the Rav. ὅτι γ' ἔστ' ἐν.

901. The 'whitebait' from Phalerum were held in estimation. Cf. Av. 76.—κέραμον, generically, 'crockery.' 'Both of these commodities,' says the Boeotian, 'may be procured at Thebes; but we have no informers.' Sup. 523 the institution was satirically called ἐπιχώριον.

904. ἔξαγε, 'export.'—ἐνδησάμενος, 'having had him packed up,' like crockery in straw, or 'having him fastened on your back.' Inf. 927 is in favour of the former sense. In 929 ἐνδησον τῷ ξένῳ is again ambiguous, 'pack up for' or 'tie upon' the stranger. Meineke here omits the verse, without the slightest reason but 'suspicion.'—νῇ τῷ σιῷ, 'by Amphion and Zethus, I might indeed get a good profit by taking him, like a monkey

909. ἅπαν κακόν. 'All there is of him is—bad.' Said παρὰ προσδοκίαν for ἀγαθόν, as in Equit. 184, ξυνειδέναί τι μοι δοκεῖς στυγῶ—καλόν, and κακῶς for καλῶς Av. 134.

910. τῷδ' ἐμὰ, as τὸν σὸν τοῦ πρέσβους sup. 93.

912. τί καὶ κακόν MSS. Elmsley omitted κακόν as a gloss, and read ταυταγί. Bergk retains the vulgate, though unrhythmic; Meineke, after Bentley, has τί δὲ κακὸν παθὼν, and so Müller and Holden. Perhaps καὶ τί κακόν κ.τ.λ.

913. The MS. Rav. has ἦρω, which may perhaps be retained, though ἦρα has good authority (Par. A.). The usual phrase is πόλεμον αἰρεσθαι, as Aesch. Suppl. 439.—ὀρναπετίοισι, Schol. ἀντὶ τοῦ ὀρνίσις. ὡς ἐπὶ ἐθνῶν δὲ λέγει.

This wick (he says, cf. 874) in the first place is contraband, in the next, it might set fire to the dock. The profound suggestion, especially with the explanation that follows, of course raises a laugh against informers' logic.—The MSS. have ἐκ τῶν πολεμίων γ', but the Aldine omits γε, which is here certainly out of place.

917. ἔπειτα κ.τ.λ. And do you then make a wick throw a light, you wick-ed wretch? (Properly, 'do you inform against me by means of a wick?') Cf. 826.

Elmsley reads καὶ θρυαλλίδα, 'do you throw a light even on a wick?'

920. τίφην. Much has been written on the question whether this word means (1) a little boat, a synonym of σιλφη, according to the Schol. on Pac. 133; (2) a straw of the rice-plant, Pliny, N. H. 18. 20. 4; (3) some kind of water-beetle, ζῶον καθαρώδες, Schol. The authorities, which about equally balance, are given in Müller's note. The 'reed-mace,' typha in English botany, τύφη in Theophrastus, may be the same word in the second sense; and if different, ἐς τύφην would be a slight change. Hamaker's conjecture ἐς σκάφην is rather ingenious. But the absurdity and impossibility is the same, whichever sense we may adopt. 'The wick,' he says, 'might be lighted and sent into the arsenal through a gutter.' How to keep a wick alight in a gutter, "our informer saith not."—ἐπιτηρήσας, 'having watched (waited) for.' Cf. 197.

925. The middle σελαγείσθαι (like ταλαιπωρεῖσθαι, ἀπορεῖσθαι) occurs also Nub. 285.—For εὐθύς, the correction of Pierson, Dr Holden adopts from Fritzsche αἱ νῆς from one MS., most having αἱ νηῦς.

926. μαρτύρομαι. He has had a smart thwack with the thong (724).—ἐνδήσας, cf. 904.

927. Most copies give φέρω. Dr Holden reads ἐνδήσω φέρειν with Elmsley. φέρῃ is given as a var. lect. in Par. B. Mr Green thinks the first person might mean 'that I may tie him up and give him (to the Boeotian);' but φέρειν must refer to carrying the bundle to Thebes. Cf. 932. The reading φέρω probably came from δός μοι preceding.—φορυτόν, 'matting.' Cf. 72.

928. The MSS. give φορούμενος, which arose from mistaking the α in καταγνύναι for the α in κατάγειν. Most critics omit the verse; but it seems more reasonable to retain it with φερόμενος, the reading of Elmsley, which is also much

Med. 677, μάλιστ', ἐπεὶ τοι καὶ σοφῆς δεῖται φρενός.—λάλον, the proper word was σαθρόν, 'he sounds porous and fire-cracked,' i.e. like cracked pots he will require extra care. Being a little man (909) Nicarchus is bundled up in straw and hung head-downwards (945) on the back of the sturdy porter, while sundry pokes and pinches are given to make him cry out. Persius, III. 21, 'sonat vitium percussa, maligne Respondet viridi non cocta fidelia limo.'

936. πάγχρηστον, 'fit for any use.' The uses suggested are all ingeniously borrowed from crockery, and this seems to show that candelabra, λαμπτήρες or λυχνούχοι, were sometimes of terra-cotta.

940. πεποιθοίῃ. This may be either the present of a reduplicated form πεποίθω, like πεφύκω, δεδοίκω, ἐστήκω (though such forms were more common in the Alexandrine poets), or the optative of the perfect, like παραδεδώκειεν Thuc. VII. 83, ἐσβεβλήκειεν ib. II. 48, ἐκπεφενγοίην Oed. R. 840, and a few other such forms. Cf. Ran. 813. Equit. 1149. Av. 1350, 1457. τῇ πεποιθήσει occurs in II. Epist. ad Corinth. x. 2. Hesych. πεποι-

ΒΟΙ. μέλλω γέ τοι θερίδδειν.

943. ψοφοῦντι. A joke between the cracked sound of the pot and the noisy chatter of the informer. (Schol.)

944. Note the purely hypothetical use, which is rare, of εἴπερ here and sup. 923.—κάτω κára, like an empty wine-jar carried with its mouth downwards. Pac. 153, κάτω κára ρίψας με βουκολήσεται.—For καταγείη A. Müller reads κατάξειας, which Dr Holden approves, believing with Cobet that the α is short in the oblique moods though long in the indicative, e.g. inf. 1180. Vesp. 1428. But a false analogy is drawn from ἐἴλω and ἀλῶναι, the root of ἀλίσκομαι being short, that of ἀγνύναι long, as in ἀγῆ, 'a fracture' or 'fragment,' Aesch. Pers. 425. Eur. Suppl. 693. Pind. Pyth. 82, where it means καμπήν. Hence the aorist infinitive is ᾄξαι, like πᾶξαι. The long α in ἐάλων is due to a peculiarity of the augment, like ἐώρων from ὄρώω.

947. μέλλω γέ τοι. 'Yes, I think I shall get a harvest out of him!' i.e. a good profit, cf. 906, 957. (Possibly he may mean, 'they'll take me for a reaper,' i.e. carrying straw in a bundle.)

948. A. Müller and Dr Holden adopt Meineke's alteration νῦν

θέριζε καὶ πρόσβαλλ', the MSS. giving συνθέριζε. (Meineke now reads βέλτιστε σὺ θέριζε καὶ τοῦτον λαβών.) It is clear that either this imperative or τοῦτον λαβών is interpolated; in favour of retaining the latter is the metre of 938. But the sense appears to turn on συκοφάντην being used unexpectedly for σωρόν (not, as Müller says, for πρὸς πάντα δεινόν). To 'shoot rubbish on any heap' was a phrase for getting rid of a worthless thing. Here it is wittily assumed that some sycophants had been "shot" already; and so the Chorus says, 'take this man too and add him to any—sycophant-heap.' Mr Green (and probably others) take the syntax to be πρὸς βάλλε συκοφάντην πρὸς πάντα, 'take and apply your sycophant to what you will.' Mr Hailstone rightly construes πρὸς πάντα συκοφάντην, but wrongly (I think) explains 'take this man and apply him as your engine against any informer you like.' The Schol. rightly explains it, πρὸς πάντα δὲ συκοφάντην ἀντὶ τοῦ εἰπεῖν σωρόν.—πρόβαλλ', the reading of Aldus, adopted by Bergk, has rather a different sense, like that of tossing food to a dog. Cf. Nub. 489—91. Soph. Aj. 830.

954. ὑπόκυπτε κ.τ.λ. See on 860—1. Ismenias is here addressed in a diminutive, as Ἀμύντας, in Theocr. vii. 2, is Ἀμύντιχος in ver. 132.

955. κατοίσεις, 'mind you carry him down into the country carefully.' Compare καταπλεῖν, κατάγεσθαι, of ships coming to land.

956. πάντως, 'anyhow,' or 'it is true that you will be taking goods of little worth, but still be careful,' ἀλλ' ὅμως εὐλαβοῦ (not οἷσεις, as Müller gives it).

959. βωστρεῖς. Cf. Pac. 1147. Hom. Od. xii. 124, βωστρεῖν τε Κηαταῖν.

960. ἐκέλευε Elmsley. The

MSS. here give ἐκέλευσε, but the imperfect is generally used in narrating a command, as in ονομάζειν and ονομάζεσθαι. Cf. 1051, 1073. A servant of Lamachus comes up and demands for his master a share in the good things. He offers to pay; but the demand is more than Dicaeopolis will submit to. From this scene, as Müller remarks, to the end of the play the contrast is drawn between the blessings of peace and the horrors and discomforts of the war.—δραχμῆς, 'for this drachma,' or 'at the price of.' Cf. 812, 830.—τριῶν δραχμῶν, not, perhaps, the real price of an eel, but specified to show how much that delicacy was prized.

964. In Il. v. 289 Ares is called ταλαύρινος πολεμιστής, whence the epithet is applied to him also in Pac. 241.—κραδαίνειν is also Homeric. Cf. Aesch. Theb. 384, τρεῖς κατασκίους λόφους σείει, κράνους χαίτωμα. Pac. 1173, τρεῖς λόφους ἔχοντα.

966. τὴν ἀσπίδα is said παρ' ὑπόνοιαν for τὴν ψυχάν.—ἐπὶ ταρίχει, 'no! let him shake those crests of his over salt fish,' i.e. the σιτί' ἡμερῶν τριῶν. See Pac. 563. inf. 1101. The old reading was ἐπὶ ταρίχῃ, corrected by Dobree and Reiske. The Schol. probably had the dative, for ταρίχῃ ἐσθίων ὀπιλιζέσθω points to the idiom παίειν ἐφ' ἄλλι, sup. 835. Dr Holden also thinks κραδαινέτω is put παρὰ προσδοκίαν for φηγέτω.

968. ἀπολιγαίνῃ, Schol. εἰ δὲ θορυβῇ ἢ ὀξέως βοᾷ. The meaning is not clear. Müller thinks the imperious loud voice of Lamachus is meant, sup. 572, but perhaps ἀπομύζῃ is rather the sense, 'if he doesn't hold his tongue, he shall have a taste of my good strap' (723).

970. ὑπαί, 'cooperatus alis,' Müller. The Schol. says the words are quoted from some ditty. The meaning more probably is, 'to the rustling sound of the wings.' Soph. El. 711, χαλκῆς ὑπαὶ σάλπιγγος ἤσαν. Inf. 1001.—κοψίχων, said to be the same as κοσσύφων, some unknown bird which we may call for convenience 'black-bird.' κίχλαι and κόψιχοι are combined in Av. 1080, 1.

971. A system of paeonics interspersed with cretics now follows, composed of strophe and antistrophe, the last verse of each being trochaic tetrameter. In this the Chorus praises the foresight of Dicaeopolis, and denounces the war with the Spartans, which they had before advocated (291 seqq).

ib. πᾶσα πόλι, i.e. πάντες πολῖται, the spectators.—οἷα κ.τ.λ., 'what market-wares he has got to dispose of by his truce.' Cf. 199.

τὰς χάρακας ἦπτε πολὺ μᾶλλον ἔτι τῷ πυρί,

974. ἐν οἰκίᾳ, viz. the mats and the wicks, sup. 874.—χλιαρά, 'warmed up,' 'served hot.' The ι is long, as in χλίειν and φλιά, and χλῖανεις in Lysist. 386. In Eccl. 64, ἐχλιανόμην ἐστῶσα, Bergk reads ἐχραινόμην, from Bekker's Anecd. i. 72. 28. But λιαρὸν occurs in Homer.

976. τῷδε γε, i.e. if not to the war-party.

979. Πόλεμον, personified, as in Pac. 236.—τὸν Ἀρμόδιον, the drinking-song or σκολιὸν (preserved by Athenaeus) in memory of the tyrannicides. Vesp. 1225, ἄδω δὲ πρῶτος Ἀρμονίου, δέξει δὲ σύ.—παρ' ἐμοί, 'at my house,' not 'next to me at table.'

981. παροίνιος, not 'tipsy,' but 'insolent in his cups.' Cf. Soph. Oed. R. 780, καλεῖ παρ' οἴνῳ. The common form is πάραινος. Elmsley, followed by Meineke and Dr Holden, read παροινικός. In Vesp. 1300 we have παροινικώτατος. So ἰσχυρός and ἰσχυρικώτερος in Plat. Theaet. p. 169 B.

982. ὅστις. See 645.—ἐπικωμάσας, a metaphor from a party of κωμαῖσται suddenly entering a private house, like Alcibiades and his friends in Plat. Symp. p. 212 D. So ἐξεκώμασε, 'went off with a galant,' Eur. Andr. 603.

983. ἀνέτρεπε. The wine-jars were overturned or smashed in the hostile εἰσβολαί, and the wine lost. See Pac. 613.

984. προκαλουμένου, 'though I made him many an offer of peace.' The incident, if historic, is important, as showing that the Athenians had already made the Spartans many overtures for peace in the early part of the war. See also Equit. 794, Ἀρχεπτολέμου δὲ φέροντος τὴν εἰρήνην ἐξεσκέδασας, τὰς πρεσβείας τ' ἀπελαύνεις, where the plural πρεσβείας is equally significant, but the verb is in the present tense.

985. φιλοτησίαν, sc. κύλικα, 'this loving-cup.'—τὰς χάρακας, Pac. 612, ὡς δ' ἀπαξ τὸ πρῶτον ἄκουσ' ἐψόφησεν ἀμπελος.

987. ἀμπέλων, παρ' ὑπ. for τῶν ἀμφορέων.

 ἢ πάνυ γερόντιον ἴσως νενόµικας µε σύ;
 ἀλλὰ σε λαβὼν τρία δοκῶ γ' ἂν ἔτι προσβαλεῖν.

988. Something (apparently a paeon) is lost at the beginning of the verse, which it is not easy to restore. The sense suggests τὸν δ' ὁ γε (or ὅδε) κάθητ' ἐπὶ τὸ δειπνον. But the elision in κάθηται can hardly be defended (see Vesp. 407. Nub. 42, 523. Av. 1340, where there is crasis rather than elision), and the Schol. explains the lost word by σπουδάζει περὶ τὸ δειπνον.—μεγάλα φρονεῖ, in allusion to the refusal sup. 966.

989. τάδε τὰ πτερὰ. It would seem from τάδε that the Chorus were on the stage; at least, they were on the raised platform on the orchestra, near enough to see pretty closely the feathers that had been thrown out by Dicaeopolis to show the good cheer in preparation.

990. ἄρα, with the imperfect, as sup. 90. Pac. 22, 566. Equit. 382. 'O lovely Peace! foster-sister of Cypris the fair and those dear Graces! Ah! little did we know all this time how beautiful was your countenance!' Compare Pac. 618, ταῦτ' ἄρ' εὐπρόσωπος ἦν (εἰρήνη), οὔσα συγγενὴς ἐκείνου. πολλὰ γ' ἡµᾶς λανθάνει. Peace, says the Schol., is favourable to marriage and to festivity, and thus to Cypris and the Charites. For the personification of Διαλλαγή see Lysist. 114.

991. πῶς ἂν κ.τ.λ. 'O that some Cupid would take and bring you and me together, like the god in the picture, with a chaplet of flowers on his head!' Some well-known painting of Eros is alluded to, the Schol. says by Zeuxis, which is likely, as he had come to Athens at the beginning of the war. Aesch. Eum. 50, εἰδὼν ποτ' ἤδη Φινέως γεγραµµένας δειπνον φερούσας. Ran. 538, μᾶλλον ἢ γεγραµµένην εἰλὸν ἔστιν αὖτις.

994. τρία προσβαλεῖν. 'Now that I have got you, I hope, old as I seem (ἐτι), to have three throws,' a metaphor from the grappling of wrestlers, whence ὦ γλυκεῖα προσβολή, 'O sweet embrace!' Eur. Med. 1074. Suppl. 1134. The phrase is, of course, ambiguous: see Equit.

1391. Av. 1256. Hor. Epod. XII. 15. Schol. λαβὼν σε ἰσχύσω συγγενέσθαι σοι τρίς καὶ πολλάκις. The lines next following, describing the planting of vines, figs, and olives, on the conclusion of the peace, have also allusive senses, as pointed out in Müller's note. Schol. κωμικῶς ὡς φιλογέωργος ἀλληγορεῖ ὡς ἐπὶ συνουσίας.

997. ἡμερίς, a cultivated vine, which we cannot distinguish from ἀμπελὶς. Od. v. 69, ἡμερὶς ἡβώεσσα, τετλήγει δὲ σταφυλῆσιν. For μόσχος, a young shoot, cf. Il. xi. 105, Ἴδης ἐν κνημοῖσι δίδῃ μόσχοιο λύγοισιν.—For ὄρχον, 'a row,' most of the copies (not, however, the Schol.) give κλάδον. Dind. gives ὄσχον (= μόσχον) with Elmsley, ὄζον Bergk. — περὶ τὸ χωρίον, 'round the farm.' Lucret. v. 1374, 'atque olearum caerulea distinguens inter plaga currere posset.'

1000. The festivities (sup. 961) now begin in earnest. The feasting in the farmer's house, and the contrast with

ib. ἀκούετε. A formula of heralds' proclamation, Pac. 551. Av. 448, where κελεύω is suppressed.—ὑπὸ, 'to the notes of,' sup. 970.

1002. The prize for him who could drink off his flask or tankard first, was a skin of wine (1202, 1230). Schol. ἐτίθετο δὲ ἀσ.ὸς πεφυσημένος ἐν τῇ τῶν Χοῶν ἑορτῇ, ἐφ' οὗ εἶδει τοὺς πίνοντας πρὸς ἀγῶνα ἐστάναι, καὶ τὸν πρῶτον πίνοντα ὡς νικήσαντα λαμβάνειν ἀσκόν. Like the jumping or hopping upon greased ἀσκοί, unctos per utres, at the Ἀσκῶλια, the fun consisted in the probability of a fall. Here the name of some pot-bellied sot is given instead of that of the wine-bag. Müller quotes a passage of Antiphanes, τοῦτεν οὖν δι' οἶνοφλυγίαν καὶ πάχος τοῦ σώματος ἀσκὸν καλοῦσι πάντες οὐπιχώριοι.

of wine, as sup. 187.—κᾶν, i.e. καὶ ἐὰν μετρῆς κ.τ.λ. Some would call this an instance of ἄν "consopitum," or redundant. A. Müller refers to Vesp. 92 and Lysist. 671.—πέντ' ἔτη, 'if only for five years.' Cf. αὐται μὲν εἰσι πεντετεῖς, sup. 188.

1022. ἐπέτρίβην, 'I am a ruined man through the loss of my two cows.' Between βοῦς and Βοιωῖτιος there is probably an intentional play.—ἀπὸ Φυλῆς, a deme of the Oeneid tribe, between Athens and Thebes.

1024. λευκὸν, i.e. you ought to put on mourning for their loss.—βολίτοις, lit. 'in cow-dirt,' meaning ἐν πᾶσιν ἀγαθοῖς. So Equit. 658, κᾶγωγ' ὅτε δὴ ἔγνωι τοῖς βολίτοις ἡττημένος, for βοῶν ἀγαθῶν.

1029. ὑπάλειψον. Anoint the eyelids underneath, as in the treatment of ophthalmia, Plut. 721.

1030. οὐ—τυγχάνω. 'I am not at present the parish doctor.' Müller quotes Plat. Gorg. p. 455 B, ὅταν περὶ ἱατρῶν αἰρέσεως ἢ τῇ πόλει σύλλογος. Add p. 514 D, εἰ ἐπιχειρήσαντες δημοσίων παρὰλλοῦν ἀλλήλῃς ὥς ἱκανοὶ ἱατροὶ ὄντες. Apol. p. 32 A, ἀναγκοῖον ἐστὶ τὸν τῷ ὄντι μαχοῦμενον ὑπὲρ τοῦ δικαίου, καὶ εἰ μέλλει ὀλίγον χρόνον σωθῆσθαι, ἰδιωτεύειν ἀλλὰ μὴ δημοσιεύειν. The Schol. gives a secondary sense, 'my position is not that of a public man,' οὐ κοινῇ ἐσπείσάμην, τουτέστι σὺν τῇ πόλει, ἰδίᾳ δὲ καὶ ἐμᾶντῳ μόνῳ. The public medicine-man at Athens at this time was Pittalus, inf. 1222. Vesp. 1432, οὕτω δὲ καὶ σὺ παράτρεχ' εἰς τὰ Πιττάλου, sc. δῶματα. Here the copies vary between τοῦ and τοῦς, sc. μαθητάς. Bergk adopts the former, which is the reading of MS. Rav. in 1232.

1041. στάθευε (to an attendant), 'broil the cuttle-fish' (or perhaps, 'the pieces of cuttle-fish'). Some parts of this ungainly creature are still used for food. 1062. οὐκ ἀξία, not a fitting person for the war, i.e. to feel the miseries of it. Cf. 591. (The conjecture αἰτία should not have been admitted by Meineke and Dr Holden. 'Not being to blame for the war' was no sufficient ground for granting the request.)

1063. ὑπεχε, see Pac. 431, 908.

1064. ποιεῖται vulgo, ποιεῖτε Rav., and so Dind., Bergk, Meineke. There is some difficulty in the plural, as well as in the present imperative. Perhaps ποιήσον was altered to ποιεῖται from ignorance of the idiom. Cf. Equit. 1158. οἶσθ' οὖν ὃ δρᾶσον. It is likely that we should read ὥς ποιείσθω. Meineke omits the verse.

ger knocks loudly at the door on the stage, and Lamachus, as before (572), comes out, dressed as a δολίτης.—χαλκοφάλαρα, parodied, as Müller supposes, from some tragedy, 'brass-accoutred' perhaps having been an epithet of σώματα, here altered to δώματα. 1076. ὑπὸ, 'about the time of,' viz. at the present festival, and when least expected.—ἐμβαλεῖν, the future.

1081. σύ. Emphatic: 'You have the laugh against me now,' as I had before against you, in calling you πρωχὸς, &c. (577).

1082. τετραπύλῳ, παρ' ὑπ. for τρισωμάτῳ, Aesch. Ag. 870. Probably he holds to his forehead, or puts on his head, like a crest, one of the four-winged locusts, τετραπτερυλλίδες, sup. 871. Perhaps the old fashion of wearing golden grasshoppers in the hair (Thuc. i. 6) is alluded to. The general sense (as the Schol. explains it) is, 'You can no more contend against me, i.e. my fortune, than against a Geryon with three lives.'

1084. αἰαῖ. He uses in mockery the same interjection, but in our sense of hah! hah! rather than ah! ah! So φεῦ occasionally is a mere note of surprise.—τίνα δ' αὖ μοι, perhaps τίν' ἐμοὶ δ' αὖ, as emphasis on the person is required.

1086. κίστην, a box like that used by modern cooks in carrying hot viands. Each guest brought his own food, in part at least, the host lending the house and supplying the accessories to the feast.—χόα, an irregular accusative, following the analogy of χῶς and χῶας, from χοῦς. Others read χοᾶ, as from χοεύς.

1087. ἱερεὺς. The priest of Bacchus, who sat as the representative of the god in a seat of honour in the theatre (Equit. 536. Ran. 297), appears to have given a grand entertainment on the 'Feast of Pitchers.'

1088. δειπνεῖν, 'from sitting down to dinner.' Hence we infer the Greek custom of waiting till all the guests were present.

Alcest. 340, σὺ δ' ἀντιδοῦσα τῆς ἐμῆς τὰ φίλτατα ψυχῆς ἔσωσας. Philoct. 434, Πάτροκλος ὃς σοὶ πατρός ἦν τὰ φίλτατα. The Schol. explains, τὰ εἰς Ἀρμόδιον σκολιὰ ἄσματα, as sup. 980; but this involves an awkward hyperbaton of καλαί, to which it is hard to find a parallel, unless indeed ἄδουσαι or ὀρχούμεναι be supposed to govern τὰ φίλτατα.

1095. ἐπεγράφου. 'Yes! for (instead of preparing dinner) you were getting the Gorgon painted on your shield as large as life.' There is a double sense, 'you were enrolling yourself under a bad demon for patron,' and therefore were truly κακοδαίμων. Pac. 684, αὐτῷ πονηρὸν προστάτην ἐπεγράψατο. Oed. R. 411, ὥστ' οὐ Κρέοντος προστάτου γεγράψομαι. We may perhaps explain μεγάλην by δεινὴν. 'The Gorgon you were getting painted was a terrible demon indeed.'

1097. γύλιον, the wicker basket in which the provisions for three days were carried, Pac. 528, 787.

1099. θυμίσας. See 772.—οἶσε, Ran. 482. inf. 1122. An anomalous form, perhaps representing the epic aorists βήσετο, δύσετο.—σαπρῶ, 'stale.' Hence in Pac. 527 the smell of the γύλιος is represented as disagreeable.

1102. δημοῦ. Elmsley for δῆ (MS. Rav.) or δῆ παῖ, where παῖ is probably a metrical interpolation. He compares Equit. 954, δημοῦ βοείου θρίον ἐξωπτημένον. The θρίον was a slice of fish, fat meat, or perhaps (Ran. 134) brain, mixed with egg, and placed between two fig-leaves, like a sandwich, and eaten hot.

1103. τὼ ἐκ τοῦ κράνους, 'belonging to my helm.' Müller says they were fastened on each side of the helmet; perhaps, therefore, to the φάλοι, which are often represented in vasepaintings, and seem to have been moveable plates or patches to protect the ears. The crests and feathers would be kept in the λοφεῖον, a round case, somewhat like our 'bandbox,' Nub. 751. inf. 1109. The Schol. gives also a variant τὸ λόφιον.

1105. This early mention of the ostrich feather for a plume is worthy of notice. 'Nice and white,' he says, 'is the feather;' to which the other retorts, 'nice and brown is the flesh of this wood-pigeon.' (The meat of all pigeons is peculiarly dark.)

1108. μὴ βλέπειν. Not to look at, i.e. not to cast an evil eye on, these fieldfares—Boissonade, whom Dr Holden follows, in transposing this couplet to follow 1112, makes three consecutive verses begin with ὦνθρωπε.

Words of the same measure and termination were regarded as sufficiently alike to satisfy the conditions of a pun; and a great many jokes in Aristophanes turn on this apparently slight resemblance, e.g. κιστίδος to ἀσπίδος, 1136—7.

1111. ἀλλ' ἦ: 'Can it be that the moths have eaten my crests?'—'Can it be that I shall devour this potted hare before dinner?' Properly, μίμαρκυν was a kind of 'snack' prepared from the inside of a hare—'hare-soup' it is sometimes rendered. The Schol. has the form μίμαρκις.

1115. βούλει (to the slave). 'Will you take a wager, and make Lamachus the umpire, whether locusts are sweeter food, or fieldfares?' The former, we may suppose, would fall to Lamachus' share on service. Hence he naturally says οἴμ' ὥς ὑβρίζεις. For περιδῶσθαι see 772.

1117. πολύ. Supply νικᾶν, and see on 651. Müller supplies ἥδιον εἶναι.

1118—9. καθελὼν, from the peg where it hung.—ἀφελὼν, from the spit or gridiron.

1120. ἐλυτρον. As the crest had its λοφεῖον, and the shield its σάγμα (574), so the spear had its bag or case, which was removed by holding one end (ἀντέχεσθαι) of the spear and drawing it out.

1122. κιλλίβαντες were three-legged stands or tressels for supporting a shield, and were probably used in review if not in the field. Like a painter's easel, or our camp-stools, this imple-

1123. κριβανίτας, sc. ἄρτους, sup. 87.—τῆς ἐμῆς, i.e. γαστέρος, 'to support my stomach.'

1126. πλατὺς. This is explained 'flat' in the sense of downright. It may also resemble our phrase 'broad grins.' But the contrast with γλυκύς suggests the meaning 'bitter' or 'brackish,' Herod. ii. 108. The MS. Rav. has πολύς, but Müller cites several authorities to show that πλατὺς was the received epithet. He compares also Pac. 814, ὦν καταχρεμψαμένη μέγα καὶ πλατὺ.

1130. γέρων, the same old man you speak of, viz. myself. —Γοργάσου, a feigned name (like Πηγάσου) to imitate the Gorgon on the shield. Lamechus was, as Müller remarks, the son of Xenophanes, Thuc. vi. 8.—κἀνθάδε, i.e. in the bright surface of the honey on the cake.

1133—5. θώραξ and θωρήσσεσθαι are used of drinkers who, as it were, protect the chest within. See Pac. 1286. For this reason a goblet is called σκευὴ βελῶν ἀλεωρῇ in Vesp. 615.

1136. τὰ στρώματα. What we call a soldier's kit was tied to the shield. We read of στρωματόδεσμον συσκευάσασθαι in Plut. Theaet. p. 175 E.

 μελέων ποιητήν, 1150

1142. Müller thinks a distich was the original reading, "quum tota hac scena versus versus accuratissime respondeat." There seems an exception however at 1114—6, though we must allow something to the change of person. But a line beginning τὴν κιστὶδ' αἶρου might have dropped out from its resemblance to the preceding.

1143. ἔτε χαίροντες seems addressed to Lamachus and his attendants, χαίροντες being added in irony. But ἔρχεσθον is addressed to the two principals, Lamachus and Dicaeopolis. Müller acutely remarks that this formula is a common commencement of a παράβασις, as in Eq. 498. Pac. 729. Nub. 510. Vesp. 1009. This passage is a kind of ἐπιρρημάτιον, as sup. 664. It is simply a strophe and antistrophe of choriambic, logaoedic, iambic, and antispastic, preceded by eight anapaestic verses. The subject, being personal to the Chorus, may further justify the name of parabasis which Müller gives to it.

1145. τῷ μὲν, sc. ὁδὸς ἐστί. Müller supplies γενήσεται.

1149. Ἀντιμαχόν. This man, mentioned also in Nub. 1022 as a low dirty fellow, was choragus in the year when the play of the Δαιταλεῖς was brought out under the name of Callistratus. If the Chorus are here speaking in their own, and not, as Müller thinks, in the poet's name, it would follow that the same chorus acted in both plays; for they complain that they were not asked to the dinner to commemorate the victory of the former play. Cf. sup. 300. Plat. Symp. p. 173 A, ὅτε τῇ π. α. τ. α. γ. δ. α. ἐκέρχον Ἀγαθὼν τῇ ὑστεραίᾳ ἢ τὰ ἐπινίκια ἔθνευ αὐτὸς τε καὶ οἱ χορευταί. Antimachus was nicknamed ὁ Ψακάδος, the Schol. tells us, εἶτα κατάξειε τις αὐτοῦ μεθύων τὴν κεφαλὴν Ὀρέστης

because (like Cleon, sup. 380) he sputtered when he spoke, ἐπεὶ ὁ πρῶτος αὐτοῦ τοῖς σιωπῶνλουπταῖς ὁμιλεῖ, verses.

1150. The word ἐνγγραφῇ is corrupt, as the metre of 1161 shows. It is thought to have crept in from a confusion of this Antimachus with one who was a prose-writer. (Schol. on Nub. 1022.) Elmsley's correction, τὸν μέλεον, seems probable.

1154. χορηγῶν, 'when choragus at the Lenaea.'—For ἀπέκλεισε δειπνῶν (MS. Rav.) there is a reading ἀπέλυσ' ἄδειπνον, 'dismissed without a dinner,' and so Bergk, Dind., Meineke, Holden. The Schol. explains this latter reading by ἀπέκλεισε δειπνῶν.

1156. ἐπίδοιμι. 'May I yet live to see him wanting a meal on cuttle-fish (1041), and may it, ready cooked and hissing-hot, be laid on the table and move towards him like a ship coming to shore.' There is some obscurity in the epithet πάραλος, which would seem to be a play between the well-known trireme so-called, and the fish being laid by some salt. The reading παρ' ἁλός, 'recens capta,' adopted by Müller and Dr Holden from Thiersch, is hardly good Greek for ἐξ ἁλός. It is probable that, like the Roman mensa, the τράπεζα was the moveable top or slab of a table, which was brought into the room and set on the frame with the dishes upon it. So Quint. Smyrn. iv. 281, ἡ δ' ἐτέρη ἀπὸ δαιτὸς αἰεὶ φορέσκε τράπεζαν. Müller and Dr Holden read ἐπὶ τραπέζῃ κειμένη, also from Thiersch, 'when the table has been set.'

1159. κᾶτα κ.τ.λ. A similar imprecation occurs Equit. 930.

1166. πατάξειε is said to be the reading of MS. Rav. Others have κατάξειε, and so the Schol. must have read, for he has κεφαλῆς in his lemma. Cf. 1180.—Ὀρέστης, a foot-pad, nicknamed μαινόμενος, and jocely called ἥρως in Av. 1490, εἰ γὰρ ἐντύχοι τις ἥρως τῶν βρομαινόμενος· ὁ δὲ λίθον λαβεῖν βουλόμενος ἐν σκοτῶ λάβοι τῇ χειρὶ πέλεθον ἀρτίως κεχεσμένον· 1170 ἐπάξειεν δ' ἔχων τὸν μάρμαρον, καῖπειθ' ἁμαρτῶν βάλοι Κρατῖνον.

ΘΕΡ. ὦ δμῶες οἱ κατ' οἶκόν ἐστε Λαμάχου, ὕδωρ ὕδωρ ἐν χυτρίδιῳ θερμαίνετε· 1175
 ὀθόνια, κηρωτὴν παρασκευάζετε, ἔρι' οἰσυπηρά, λαμπάδιον περὶ τὸ σφυρόν.
 ἀνὴρ τέτρωται χάρακι διαπηδῶν τάφρον, καὶ τὸ σφυρόν παλίνορρον ἐξεκόκκισε, καὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς κατέαγε περὶ λίθον πεσών,

τῶν νύκτωρ Ὀρέστη, γυμνὸς ἦν πληγὴς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ πάντα τάπι-δέξια. See also ibid. 712, εἴτα δ' Ὀρέστη χλαῖναν ὑφαίνειν, ἵνα μὴ ῥιγῶν ἀποδύη.

1170. πέλεθον, i.e. ὄνθον, mer-
dam.

This is jocosely called μάρ-μαρος, after the rude weapon of the Homeric heroes. Meineke gives τὸν βόρβορον with Hermann. But βόρβορος is a general term (Vesp. 259, where conversely and perversely Hermann and Meineke read μάρ-μαρος), and thus the article seems out of place.

1173. Κρατῖνον. An unexpected word for τὸν ἐχθρόν.
 Schol. οὐ τὸν ποιητὴν, ἀλλὰ τινα ἀλαζόνα καὶ θρασὺν καὶ μαινόμενον καὶ μέθυσον.

1174. A messenger comes in haste to announce that Lamachus has been wounded in the fray, soon followed by the general himself borne on a litter.
 It is remarkable that his death really occurred some ten years later under precisely similar circumstances, Thucyd. vi. 101.

Doubts, however, have been thrown on the genuineness of part of this speech.

1176. ὀθόνια κ.τ.λ. 'Prepare lint and cerate (salve), greasy wool, a splint for his ankle!' The unwashed wool was thought to have healing properties in the οἰσπῶτη, grease and sweat of an undressed fleece, also called οἰσύπη. The Romans appear to have applied
 it moistened with wine, Iuv. v.
24, 'vinum, quod sucida nolit lana pati.'

1179. ἐκκοκκίζειν (Pac. 63) is properly to squeeze out the pips from a pomegranate. Hence the dislocating a bone from its socket. The Schol. evidently read ἐξεκόκκυσεν, for he explains ἐκτραπὲν τῆς ἁρμονίας ἤχησεν.— παλίνορρον, παλίνορσον, 'so as to start the wrong way,' out of joint.

1180. τῆς κεφαλῆς, μέρος τι,
 a usual ellipse with καταγνύναι,
 e.g. Vesp. 1428, καὶ πῶς κατέαγε τῆς κεφαλῆς μέγα σφόδρα. Here perhaps we should read κατέαξε.
 Cf. 1166.

καὶ Γοργόν' ἐξήγειρεν ἐκ τῆς ἀσπίδος. 1181
 πτίλον δὲ τὸ μέγα κομπολακύθου πεσὸν

 τοσαῦτα λέξας εἰς ὑδρορρόαν πεσὼν ἀνίσταται τε καὶ ξυναντᾷ δραπέταις ληστὰς ἐλαύνων καὶ κατασπέρχων δορί.
 ὁδὶ δὲ καὐτός· ἀλλ' ἄνοιγε τὴν θύραν.

ΛΑΜ. ἀτταταῖ ἀτταταῖ, 1190
 στυγερά τάδε γε κρυερὰ πάθεα. τάλας ἐγώ διολλυμαι δορὶς ἱπὸ πολεμίου τυπεῖς.
 ἐκεῖνο δ' αἰακτὸν ἂν γένοιτό μοι, 1195
 Δικαιοπόλις γὰρ ἂν μ' ἴδοι τετρωμένον,

1181—8. The genuineness of this passage has been suspected for several reasons. The first verse seems made up from 574; and the κομπολακύθου πτίλον still more evidently from 587—9. The construction, too, of πεσὸν as an accusative absolute is, as Müller remarks, "rarissimum;" nor is it less difficult to make πτίλον the subject to ἐξηύδα. There is a mock-tragic tone about the passage which is like the style of the poet. Meineke omits the whole of it; Müller and Dr Holden inclose in brackets 1186—8. Bergk incloses only 1181, and proposes λιπὼν for πεσὸν at the end of the next verse.

1185. φάος γε Aldus, the γε not being found in MS. Rav. It is clearly a metrical insertion. Meineke reads λείπω φάος τοῦτ' οὐκέτ' οὐδὲν εἰμ' ἐγώ. It may be doubted if this is Greek at all. The Attics do not say

1187. ξυναντᾷ. He confronts his runaways, i.e. tries, though sorely hurt, to rally his troops.

1190—1225. Attempts have been made, by some rather violent alterations, to bring these lines into a system of strophes and antistrophes. The repetition of ἀτταταῖ in mockery of Lamachus is itself no proof of any such arrangement; and to force 1191—4 into an iambic distich (the γε after τάδε is wanting in MS. Rav.) seems by no means a successful attempt.

—Lamachus, it is plain, again uses mock-tragic language.

1196. The γάρ is wanting in MS. Rav., but given in the Paris MSS., which read εἰ for ἄν. 'Dicaeopolis might perhaps see me wounded; and then he might mock at my misfortunes.' Elmsley and others with one MS. read κατ' ἐγχείνοι. The Schol.

καὶ τ' ἐγχείνοι ταῖς ἐμαῖς τύχαισιν.

ΔΙΚ. τοῖς Χουσί γάρ τις ξυμβολὰς ἐπράττετο; 1211

read κατεγχείνοι, which is a vox nihili. The MS. Rav. gives ἐγχανεῖται. The passage has been tampered with, perhaps from the uncertainty which clause was the condition and which the result; and hence the MSS. fluctuate between εἰ and ἂν. If these verses correspond with 1198—1202, we should perhaps read in 1195 ἐκεῖνο δ' οὖν αἰακτόν ἂν γένοιτο, Aldus and two MSS. giving the οὖν. Grammarians however were too fond of completing senarii by additions of their own.

1199. κυδώνια, 'like quinces.' So μαστοὶ are called μῆλα, Lys. 155, Eccl. 903.

1204. Bergk would give this line to Dicaeopolis after 1201.

1207. Meineke, by giving μογερὸς ἐγώ to Lamachus, destroys the whole fun of the passage, which consists in the jolly farmer mocking the tone of the suffering soldier. The conjecture is Bergk's; but Bergk himself does not adopt what Dr Holden calls "certissima emendatio." It would be better perhaps to assign to Lamachus τί με σὺ δάκνεις; 'Why do you vex me so?' Then Dicaeopolis, speaking to the girl on his knee and taking δάκνεις literally, aptly replies τί με σὺ κυνεῖς; 'And why do you kiss me?'

1210. ξυμβολῆς, 'encounter.' The reply is, 'Who ever thought of taking Chorus (tokens in payment; but literally 'contributions') at the Feast of the Pitchers?' Or we may render the words by 'heavy charge' and 'making a charge.'

1211. τοῖς Χουσί τις ξυμβολὰς σ' ἐπράττεν; is the conjecture of Bergk.

ΛΑΜ. ἰὼ ἰὼ Παιὰν Παιάν.

ΔΙΚ. ἀλλ' οὐχὶ νυνὶ τήμερον Παιώνια.

1212. ἰὼ ἰὼ Παιὰν ἰὼ Παιὰν ἰὼ, Müller after Dindorf and Bergk.

1219. σκοτοδιनिῶ. Plato uses this word Theaet. p. 155 D, and Legg. p. 663 B.

1222. Πιττάλου, see 1032.

1224. κριτάς, the umpires of the drinking-match, βασιλεὺς being the rex bibendi or president. There is probably an allusion to the judges of the rival dramas.

1225. ἀπόδοτε, 'pay me,' as a debt due. Cf. 1002.

1227. τήνελλα. This word was a vocal imitation of the ting or twang of a lute-string.

It was used, as we know from Pindar, Ol. ix. 1, as an extempore accompaniment to three short verses of Archilochus, in honour of a victor at the Games, till the longer hymn was ready for performance.

1228. εἵπερ καλεῖς γε. 'Since you challenge me to it.' This use of γε after εἵπερ with an intervening word is not uncommon. Aesch. Cho. 215, kān τοῖς ἐμοῖς ἄρ', εἵπερ ἔν γε τοῖσι σοῖς.

1229. καὶ πρὸς γε. The conditions of victory were (1) to drink up the cup first; (2) to cæopolis in triumph from the stage in a rustic procession or village κῶμος. The Aves ends similarly, τήνελλα καλλίνικος, ὃ
